Army Officers Study Maneuver Orders and Maps by Light of Lanterns.

MARCH BEGINS ON MONDAY

Two Armies Not Expected to Come Together for General Engagement Until Nightfall—McDonnell Is in Command.

MURRAY, Wash., Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Two armies instead of one occupy the American Lake district tonight. Segregation, the maneuver troops were made today and the 5000 fighting men were assigned to one army or the other for the period of simulated warfare. Brigade commanders were given their problems tonight and the necessary instructions were handed down to subordinate officers. The result is that maps of the district are being generally studied by light of lanterns and candles. Both sides are determined to win.

McDonnell to Command Brown.

Colonel Charles E. McDonnell, of Portland, commanding the Brown army, will have the Third Oregon Infantry, the Sixth United States Infantry, the Fourth Oregon, two troops of the Fourteenth Cavalry, a battery of the Fourth United States Artillery, a hospital corps detachment, ambulance company, signal corps detachment, and a pack and wagon train for stores, supplies and war equipment.

In the Blue army, according to tonight's segregation, will be the Second Washington Infantry, the Third United States Infantry, the Third Battalion of the Second United States Infantry, a troop of Washington Cavalry, a troop of the Fourteenth United States Cavalry, a mountain battery, a battery of the Fourth United States Field Artillery, signal and hospital corps detachments, an ambulance company, pack and wagon train.

Night Attack Expected.

An engagement may occur late in the afternoon, by which time it is entirely possible the forces will be in contact with each other. Again the day may be passed without a general engagement. At night the Brown army will bivouac in the field, fatigued from a hard march of from 10 to 20 miles in the marching order. Here a second problem in protecting the main body of the retreating army will have to be worked out. At least one full regiment will be assigned to outpost duty. The men of most endurance will be put out on the Coscacks posts and picket lines. Cavalry patrols will scour the resting army for several miles, scouting all night for evidences of the enemy.

General Brush Gives Advice.

A defect in tactics pointed out by General Brush is that bodies of troops acting as advance guards of larger forces are apt to bring on an engagement too precipitately. He has issued instruction directing that officers must bear in mind at all times that when with advance guards their commands are but fractions of a larger unit and are to be controlled accordingly. Advancing independently, forgetful of the main force, is a thing greatly to be deprecated. General Brush points out that a dilatory as well as precipitate attack is to be avoided.

Governor's Reception Success.

The reception given last night by the Third and Fourth Oregon Infantry officers in honor of Governor Chamberlain proved a tremendous success. All the regular service officers, including General Brush and staff, were guests, and all voted the affair the most successful and the most pleasant one ever witnessed in the field. A fine musical programme was played by the Third Oregon band and there were refreshments in profusion.

Empires to Accompany Troops.

Empires, detached from the regular army, will accompany the two opposing armies in the field Monday, and upon their decisions defeat or success of the contending forces will rest. An umpire will be assigned to each battalion and will follow each and every movement. Troops exposed to heavy fire will be ruled out of the contest. An umpire will be made for casualties according to the general exposure and tactics displayed. Every officer will be thrown on his resources, especially his mental, organizational, company, troop and battery commanders.

More Citizen Soldiers.

It is said, on good authority, that the result will be recruiting of heavier forces of citizen soldiers, to serve as a National reserve, a capacity already filled by the state troops. The government has seemed to favor larger militia forces for at least two or three years past, the warmest advocate of the idea being William Taft while he was Secretary of War. Mr. Taft, last summer, made an announcement of his belief that 400,000 Guardsmen should be maintained in the country as a Na-

COL. C. E. McDONELL, 3RD OREGON, AND OFFICERS DISCUSSING AN OUTPOST PROBLEM

Two Armies Contend for Supremacy

The American Lake district will cease to be a great military classroom on Monday and become a field of simulated warfare. When the 5000 men are divided into two armies, the "Blues" and the "Browns," so designated from the color of shirts to be worn, friendly relations between the two armies will be severed for two days of arduous campaigning. Every detail of the week's lesson will be applied to the test of practical execution. Commanders of brigades, of regiments, of battalions of companies and warrant officers in charge of patrols and outpost squads will be thrown on their resources. As to the outcome there is no doubt. Some individual glory will be achieved, but it is safe to say the two armies will measure full up to the requirements of modern warfare.

Concealment of Troops in an Advance

Concealment of troops in an advance is regarded by Brigadier-General Brush, commanding the camp, as one of the foremost essentials of success in a wartime movement. As pointed out by General Brush, the difficulty of keeping men from exposing themselves when advancing, when they know there is no danger from an opposing army using blank ammunition, is well understood. But officers who expect to escape criticism will have to operate their forces Monday and Tuesday quite the same as if the bullets were of metal.

Court Says English Cigars Must Be Sold as Such.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—A series of criminal actions has recently been taken against tobaccoists in London at the instance of the Havana Cigar Manufacturers' Protective Association for applying a false description to English-made cigars. The case of the prosecutors was that the Spanish word "got up" of the boxes were used to imitate the Havana products. Backed by the English cigar manufacturers, the last of the victims pleaded "not guilty" and was tried at the Old Bailey. He was convicted and fined $20, and having appealed to the court of appeal in criminal cases the right of the British manufacturers to continue the use of the Spanish language on their labels and trade marks was fully discussed, and finally the Lord Chief Justice and Justices Channell and Darling upheld the conviction.
