On Wednesday at high noon at Oak Hill, the country home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Duncan Cameron, in the White Salmon Valley, Miss Cora Columbia Cameron was quietly married to Harold Newbold Lawrie, of New York. The marriage was the culmination of a romance begun in the bride's junior year at the University of Oregon, when Mr. Lawrie was visiting a Theta Delta Fraternity brother. The bride was married in her graduating gown and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. Clementine Cameron attended the bride and Oswald Cameron was best man. Miss Mabel Ayers sang sweetly. "Oh, Promise Me" before the ceremony, and the bridal party entered the room she sang "Because." A wedding breakfast was served, after which the bride and groom departed amid a shower of sweet peas and rice. After two or three weeks in the mountains of Southern Oregon they will leave for the Queen Charlotte Islands, where Mr. Lawrie has mining interests.
