DISTRUSTS GOOD FAITH OF SULTAN

English Press Pessimistic Concerning Reform Wave in Turkey.

CRAFTY ABDUL GAINS TIME

Thinks Powers May Yet Intervene. Situation in "Sick Man's" Domain Analyzed—Eyes of True Believers Are Opened.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—Great uneasiness prevails here in regard to conditions in Turkey, and all kinds of views are expressed regarding it. The young Turks and their foreign sympathizers may flatter themselves that all sorts of wonderful things are going to happen, but the Sultan is evidently only endeavoring to gain time, and it seems that this was the only thing he could do in the circumstances. Action by the powers is still possible. A writer in the Daily Telegraph says: "Germany, as usual, is making the most of her opportunities. Only those who have been in close touch with the Ottoman Empire during the past twenty-five years can form any reliable opinion of the prestige lost by Britain and gained by Germany during this period throughout the whole of the nearer East. General von Goltz, a personal friend of the Kaiser, is reorganizing the Turkish army, and is in daily touch with the Sultan and his advisers. The most important railway concessions and mining concessions have been obtained by German engineers. The new bridge across the Golden Horn is to be constructed by a German firm, of German material. Germany has stood first commercially and politically at Yildiz since Russia was crippled in the Far East. The Austrian Empire comes next, and England comes a very poor third.

England Loses Art Treasures.

"The Kaiser's friend, Dr. Wegener, curator of the Berlin National Museum, holds in his hands the rights and concessions for excavations in the Levant, and the majority of the Byzantine and Graeco-Roman antiquities that have been unearthed during the past decade have, as a matter of course, found their way to Berlin. In this direction Great Britain is positively asleep. "It is a crying shame that no sooner are early Christian parchments and antiquities brought to light, to say nothing of priceless pagan marbles, etc., than they are smuggled through to Berlin and Vienna. Any intelligent traveler who takes the trouble to visit Constantinople can see with his own eyes the way in which Britain is slowly allowing herself to be ousted in every direction."

A writer in the Times says: "Formerly Moslems in the Asiatic Provinces of the Ottoman Empire had very few political notions, and beyond minding their crops, selling their goods, and rearing their families, paid little heed to the affairs of state or administration. Their views on such subjects were simple—the Government or Dowla was a thing to be obeyed; the official, the necessary evil, and a Moslem's whole duty was to keep his Christian fellow-subjects in order, treat them kindly if they were submissive, or smite them if they rebelled, while service in the army for so many days or years, as the Khalif chose to direct, was to a Moslem a matter of course.

Basis of Old Regime.

"The calm and deliberate acceptance of this creed by the majority of the Turkish and Arabic-speaking Moslems of Asiatic Turkey was one of the chief practical foundations of the Constantinople regime. Hitherto the central authority has always had at its disposal two forms of coercion, of which the most powerful is itself in event of the Moslems of Asia, growing restless—either the Armenians or other Christian people might be regarded as dangerous to the state or a naval demonstration of the Powers could be provoked. In the first instance the Asiatic Moslems could be deluded into believing that the Christians threatened them and their property; in the second, that the nations of Christendom were being held at bay by the diplomacy of the Moslems against Christian supremacy; and in the third, that the Moslems were being oppressed, and that the Moslem Government, corruption, tyranny, extortion and material poverty would be far preferable to dishonorable subjection.

Their Eyes Are Opened.

"However, judging from recent events, it would appear as if the Asiatic Moslems were beginning to wonder whether the wretched condition of the empire could not be mitigated by their own efforts. In Castamuni, Sivas, Sinope, Aleppo, Bitlis, Changri, and Erzerum and other important cities, the Moslems have on one pretext or other tried conclusions with the Government; in each case they gained their point without trouble, because the Moslem soldiers would not shoot Moslem demonstrators, and those whose business it was to know this were well aware of the fact. The cry of Islam in danger no longer evokes enthusiasm, nor do suggestions of Christian disloyalty obtain such ready credence as heretofore; nearly the whole of the younger military officers and many of their seniors are weary of insane wars in the Yemen, purposeless expeditions into Persia, and murderous affrays in Macedonia, where there is neither honor nor remuneration to be obtained.

"The merchants, landowners and citizens are beginning to realize the price that is being paid for foreign concession hunters for laying down the various circuitous lines of railway leading from nowhere to nowhere. Civil officials grow more and more irritated against the Government on account of the rapid increase of the acreage of the crown lands and the insolence and turbulence of the Cretans, Tartars, Circassians, Chacans and other aliens who inhabit the estate of the civil list; they pay no taxes, and drive away the peaceful population. The law-abiding Moslem peasantry are beginning to perceive that they are the only people who have neither bishop, consul, nor mission to defend them.

Spread Propaganda.

"Lastly, the policy of the Central Authority in banishing young Turks, disgraced officials, and others from Constantinople to the various provincial capitals has unwittingly provided the party of discontent with a complete system of propaganda throughout the empire. The true

DEPLORES NUDE ON STAGE

Public Prosecutor in Paris Places Actresses on Gridiron.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—"It seems," said the Public Prosecutor, in the trial of a number of actresses accused of improper conduct on the stage, "that music-halls and cafes maintain an striking out in a new direction. In lieu of the ballads sung in the time of our grandfathers, the chief element of success is now constituted by the music in which, amid a dazzling display of lights and colors, groups of pretty actresses appear cleverly exposed in the scantiest costume made by our leading dressmakers."

"It is to happen that the custom of dressing these actresses so scantily leads to the conclusion that it is simpler not to dress them at all. These words were spoken in severe tones, in the presence of half a dozen accused actresses and their managers, before a full court. The actresses, on the other hand, strongly protested against the accusations of having taken part in scandalous scenes. One of them, accused of too ardent a display in a love scene, said that it was not true that she had actually kissed her companion on the stage. The nearest spectators were some 25 feet away, and what they saw was a mere vague blue light. Both the actresses, moreover, had their faces made up with rouge and other colors, and if they had actually kissed, the grease paint would have melted off the face of the one who kissed her companion on the stage. These statements were followed with great interest, not only by the public, but by the court. The charges against the actresses were severe. They were due to the campaign started some time ago by the Deputy M. Delahaye, who had undertaken to purge the Parisian stage of indecency. The offenders were heavily fined.

SOCIALIST RIOTS FEARED

London Police Expect Trouble if Times Are Hard.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—Although the general public affects to regard the riots of the last week as a thing of the past, the police are perfectly aware that should there be a severe winter with more unemployed than ever in London, there is every probability of serious riots. The extreme Socialists have been much irritated of late and disloyal speeches against the King, such as would amount to direct insurrection in Germany, are heard every day in Hyde Park and at street corners. Keir Hardie is still stirring up all the trouble he can over the Windsor Garden party incident, when the King or the Lord Chamberlain left his name out of the list of invitations. Another Socialist and "leader of the mob" having been severely worked in a libel action which he brought against a London newspaper in vowing vengeance in the form of organized riots, and still another and now dangerous leader Stuart Gray, who attempted to camp out in Windsor Park last winter, makes no secret of his intention to stir up trouble in the streets of the capital at the first opportunity. Although he openly advocated the use of revolvers in Hyde Park, he was not arrested.

The police are watching the movements of all the leaders of the violent wing of the party most carefully, but they are acting with great tact. The Commissioner of Police, however, has already organized a complete campaign in case of emergencies.

STRICKEN ON THE STAGE

Pretty Parisian Actress' Illness Nearly Breaks Up Performance.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—By forgetting her part after playing it more than 400 times, Mile. Delvaux, of the Comedie Francaise, created a painful scene on the stage of that historical theater. Mile. Delvaux, one of the most popular of the actresses with the Paul Moures stock company, was playing the title role in "Marion Delorme" and played with unusual vigor until the beginning of the fourth act, when she was suddenly indisposed and when she reached an important scene found she had entirely forgotten her lines. Prompting failed to finish the scene as best she could. Mile. Delvaux was carried off the stage, and fainting behind the scenes. Although she insisted on going through the fifth act, she could only murmur a line incoherently, and had to be supported by three superns. Mile. Delvaux is now lying seriously ill.

SUFFER FOR BEAUTY SAKE

Fashionable Women Have Eyelashes Sewed In With Needle.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—"Planting" eyelashes is the latest torture which women endure for beauty's sake. The operation, which is every delicate and painful, is thus described in the Paris Health Journal. "A long hair is singled out of the patient's head. A needle is threaded with it and forced in and out of the skin along the edge of the eyelid, forming a series of loops. These loops are then cut at the extremities, and the rows of lashes thus obtained are curled upwards with curlers. When the operation is finished the patient has to spend 12 hours with an oiled bandage over the eyes. The process for the manufacture of eyebrows is similar."

GIVES LONDON FREE SHOW

Chicago Man Lets Public Watch Steel Building Grow.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—Harry Gordon Selfridge, Inc. of Chicago, and who is now building a huge department store in London, has broken down one of the iron-bound conventions of the building trade, instead of shutting out the public from the new building by the stereotyped notice: "No admittance except on business," Mr. Selfridge actually invites the passerby to come in and watch the building grow. For the safety and comfort of the public a platform has been provided, and the crowds have taken the opportunity to see how a great building is constructed of steel on the American plan.

BUNGLED ON TRAIN

Mussulman Emigrants Robbed by Two Countrymen.

PARTY LEFT PENNILESS

Twelve Stranded Orientals Bound for America Given Shelter in France—Time-Honored Bogus Ticket Game Is Worked.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—Curious is the story of a dozen Mussulman emigrants, who are being sheltered at the public asylum of Nanterre, and a pair of swindlers, their countrymen, one of whom has only one eye and who has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment. The wretched emigrants, with only a moderate sum in their possession, and the greater part of their fortunes contained in the bundles they were carrying took the boat at Beyrout, intending to go to America. After remaining huddled on the deck of the steamer for days, and traveling in slow trains they reached Paris, and were put on board the train for Clappe by an interpreter who explained to them how they were to get to London and Liverpool, and take steamer for America.

Hardly had the train started when a Mussulman took a seat in one of the compartments, and told them he had come to replace the interpreter. He spoke in Arabic, which was further confirmed, and after a while asked them to show their tickets. "They are worthless," he exclaimed, as soon as he saw them. "I shall call the 'mudir' that is to say, the inspector of the train," he added. The poor creatures were terrified when he further told them they would not be able to take the steamer for America. The alleged "mudir," a one-eyed, miserably clad Mussulman, appeared, and the false guide bowed down to the ground before him. "You will have to pay your fares again," said the one-eyed "mudir." In vain the wretched alighted and remonstrated. They had spent all their fortune on the first tickets. "I am the master here," said the "mudir." "You will have to pay." He seized one of the children from the train, and opened the compartment door, and threatened to fling it out if she did not pay. The mother surrendered, and the false "mudir" and his companion searched in her belt, and took all she possessed—a sum of about $50.

Given Worthless Tickets.

Little by little the other emigrants also yielded and gave the last penny they had, in return for which the two robbers took their railway and steamer tickets, and gave them instead worthless old tickets of the Paris Metropolitan, which they said were the right ones. The "mudir" and his companion then disappeared. The emigrants had no end of trouble afterwards with the railway officials, but they got as far as Newhaven, The Turkish Consul-General having refused to pay their way to their own country. The French government sent them to the Nanterre asylum. The one-eyed "mudir" and his accomplice were arrested and remanded for trial. The court, in sentencing the perpetrator to a term of imprisonment, gave him the maximum penalty allowed by law.

FICTION IS BADLY BEATEN

WHAT PASSES FOR TRUTH IN PARIS MORE INTERESTING.

Long-Lost Uncle's Millions Make Poor but Honest Couple Rich and Happy.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—(Special.)—Fortune has smiled on a waiter in a local cafe in the most unexpected manner. This man left his native village years ago, and came to Paris to struggle along, but he was beginning to get a little better off. For a while it was an uphill task, but eventually he got a place in a good cafe, and as he was steady he was not dismissed. The other day he was beginning to time by reading the advertisements in a newspaper, when, to his surprise, he saw his own name figuring in a notice inserted by a lawyer. He immediately went to the lawyer, and he was told that he had inherited a fortune of $100,000. It is scarcely necessary to add that the waiter has thrown his apron to the winds, though he has no intention of launching into extravagant ways. On the contrary, he says that as he is still young, he intends to buy a business, and to devote all his attention to it while his wife remembers certain poor relations, whom she will be only too glad to assist. The wealthy great-uncle has not, as it appears, expired so recently. Indeed, according to one account he is said to have died about 17 years ago, leaving behind him $200,000, of which the state took possession, as no heir appeared. This capital has since doubled, so that the $600,000 is no myth, but a substantial reality. The old man, who is believed to have been born in 1811, died seven years' fighting in Africa, and liked the country so well that he settled there. He expired in 1881 in Africa, having made his money in agriculture. Being so far away he had neglected all communications with his relations, who had virtually forgotten his very existence.

McLachlan Is Renominated.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Aug. 15.—Congressman James McLachlan, of the Seventh Congressional District, was renominated by the Republican convention in the Auditorium here today. There was no opposition to McLachlan.
