ALL-AMERICA END, WHO WILL COACH OREGON

ELEVEN THIS SEASON

ROBERT W. FORBES, OF YALE.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Or., Aug. 22.—(Special.)—Robert W. Forbes, the big Yale end who will coach Oregon this season, is perhaps the most noted football man ever secured to coach a Northwest team. His college football career began at Wesleyan University, where he played for two seasons as guard and tackle. He afterward entered Yale, where he played tackle in 1905 and end in 1906, being chosen both years for the All-America eldven.

Forbes was graduated from Yale in 1907, and last Autumn coached the West Point football squad. He lives at Ballard, Wash, where he is engaged in the lumber business. He is about 30 years old, and is a big, powerful man, weighing more than 200 pounds. Under his coaching, the Oregon team is expected to make an excellent record.

IDAHO'S BRIGHT PROSPECT

Pullman Suffers Loss of Veterans, While Washington Is Fortunate in Securing Michigan Tackle.

BY REFEREE. Football enthusiasis in the Inland Empire are looking forward to the coming season with no little interest, for there is every reason to believe that the teams of that section will play some high-class ball this year. Rivalry between Idaho, Pullman and Whitman is intense and their annual gridiron struggles have attracted widespread attention during recent years.

John won the Inland Empire champlonship last season by defeating both Whitman and Pullman. The victory over the latter team was altogether unexpected, as Coach Bender's men had been heraided as sure winners. Those who saw the Idaho men when they met Oregon on Multnomah field remember how brilliantly they played and how they surprised the Eugene collegians with their Idaho "spread" formation.

John Middleton's skillful coaching was responsible for Idaho's phenomenal work with the open formations and the forward pass, and although his men were lighter than most of their opponents their defense was first-class. Idaho certainly mare a fine record last year and the critics are now speculating as to chances for the coming season.

Idaho's Bright Prospects.

No team in the Northwest has suf fered less than Idaho by graduation and the enforcement of the Walla Walla conference rules. Only three men-Keyes, Stein and Armstrong-will be Meyes, Stein and Armstrong—will be missing when Middleton calls his men together next month. Eight veterans and all the substitutes of last season will be on hand.

The team will be captained by Leigh The team will be captained by Leigh Savidge, last year's All-Northwest end. Savidge is the best end produced in this part of the country, since the adoption of the new game and Idaho expects great things from him this year. With eight veterans as a nucleus Conc... Middleton ought to develop a team that will prove a strong factor in the race for Northwest championship honors.

One of Idaho's most Important games athletic committee will allow him to compete. Rader has played five years of football, although during three of these years he was a preparatory student. He first played on Puget Sound University, during the season of 1961. He then went to Williamette University, where he played during the seasons of 1964, 1995 and 1995. He was not a student of college rank until the last-mentioned year, and last year's game between these institutions was played on Oregon soil, this season's contest will be at Moscow, and the date agreed upon is October 30. Idaho's team promises to be stronger than last season's Gem State aggregation and Oregon will have her work cut out for her.

Pullman Loses Veterans.

Pullman's prospects for a successful eason are not as bright as they were a year ago. Of last season's team that defeated St. Louis University on Christmas day, five of the best players will be conspicuous by their absence. Goldsworthy and Miller have been graduated, while Hardy. Nissen and Miner are victims of the four-year rule. The team still has six veteran players and several good substitutes, with an abundance of good material in sight.

With such men as Wexler, Halm, Rorer, Cave, Bryan and Cherry, the Pullmanites have a strong bunch of veterans as a nucleus for their team. The question of Rader's eligibility has been raised by good substitutes, with an abundance of good material in sight.

With such men as Wexler, Haim, Rorer, Care, Bryan and Cherry, the Pullmanites have a strong bunch of veterans as a nucleus for their team. The question of Rader's eligibility has been raised by some of the rivals of Washington State College, but it seems that his faculty athletic committee will allow him to commette. Rader has played five years of Bowdoin College. There is sorrow to the camp of the Sons of Marcus be cause it has been officially announced that Captain Walter Brubaker will not return to college. Brubaker recently tendered his resignation as captain but his successor cannot be selected until college opens. Whitman has also lost a number of good men by gradua-tion and the Northwest Conference rules have fallen with more force of the Missionaries than upon any other team in the Northwest.

Four-Year Rule Havoc.

The four year rule has played havon with Whitman's football men, although a construction of the rule similar to the one in the Rader case would per-mit several of them to play one or two additional years. Coach Blanchard will have a few reliable veterans and a large squad of new men from which to select his team. Although Whitman's prospects are not as bright as those of Pullman and Idaho, there is no indication that the Missionaries will have a feated the local clubmen last year, a. Manager Pratt's men will make a strong effort to turn the tables.
