HUMAN TIDE TURNS, AND THE SEPTEMBER EXODUS FROM SEA BEACHES IS ON

FOUND A MAN

AFTER A BATTLE WITH THE SURF

SEASIDE, Or., Sept. 5.—(Special.)— The general exodus from Seaside was most perceptible this past week. Cottages are closing, tourists are turning homeward, and the younger folk are hastening back to the city to get ready for the coming school year.

The special trains will continue their present schedule until mid-September, and the Moore hostelry, Sargent's Seaside House and Locksley Hall have booking well into this month. The Moore will as usual remain open throughout the year.

As long as the present weather conditions continue, it is predicted that the week-end crowds will go down as usual. The special amusements on the Shell road have folded their tents like the Arabs and silently stolen away. Boating and fishing on the always picturesque Necanicum are as popular as in mid-season and a great many people who either could not get away, or preferred to come later to the beach, are choosing September for their outing month. The trip from Portland to Seaside is a most lovely one at this season of the year. Nowhere can be seen finer, rarer, Autumnal coloring than in the trees and meadows that border the beautiful Columbia.
