MISS MIRIAM STRONG WHOSE MARRIAGE TO MR. HARRY SLADEN OCCURS ON WEDNESDAY

trimmed with rose point and an amethyst shade of panne velvet, which was completed by a gold butterfly brooch and an antique necklace of pearls. Miss MacMaster was attired in a girlish ankle-length frock of white chiffon and wore a broad white sash around her head.

The invitation list included Mr. and Mrs. David T. Honeyman, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Nunn, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Alvord, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley Ladd, Mrs. H. W. At last report Mrs. J. B. Montgomery and her daughter, Miss Margaret, were at the famous German watering place, Carlsbad.

Rumor has it that Fritz Scheff, of both comic and grand opera fame, will soon announce her engagement to the Kentucky novelist, John Fox, Jr., the author of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and other "best sellers." Mr. Fox acted as one of the American correspondents for an Eastern magazine during the war in Japan.

Miss Caroline Burns accompanied Miss Evelyn and Caroline Wilson and Miss Georgina Burns across the continent. She, however, will not sail with them for Europe, but will visit some school friends at Farmington, which has since been called Briar Cliff.

Perfect in every detail was the dancing party Tuesday which Mr. and Mrs. William MacMaster gave at their charming place, Argour, which adjoins the golf links. This is one of the most artistic and picturesque homes either in Portland or its environs, being of English style of architecture, and built on low rambling lines, while all the rooms, with the exception of the servants' quarters, are on the one floor. The grounds are spacious and presented an attractive appearance as the great fir trees were studded with many colored Japanese lanterns, additional color being given from at least two scores of motor cars. The various drawing-rooms were thrown together for dancing though one was used for bridge devotees. The front piazza was arranged with Turkish rugs and divans, while the north gallery or summer breakfast room was inclosed with canvas and served as a rendezvous during dances.

Though Miss Katherine MacMaster has not yet made her debut, she assisted her mother in receiving, as she is to return in the near future to Miss Chamberlain's finishing school, near Boston.

Two private cars were at the disposal of the guests though many motored. Mrs. MacMaster wore a gown cut on the prevailing empire lines of chiffon embroidered in lavender Scotch thistles, the bodice of American beauties, bride and bridesmaid roses, in fact embracing the entire gamut of the early Fall flowers, all of which were sent the bride-elect and for Miss Claire Houghton, who also celebrated her 18th birthday.

Serving in the dining-room at a table with a stunning mass of bride roses were Mrs. Helen Ladd Corbett, Mrs. Howard Mather, Mrs. Theodore B. Wilcox and Mrs. J. Frank Watson, all four appearing in handsome gowns of white. Assisting in receiving were Mrs. J. Wesley Ladd, Miss Ella Hirsch, Mrs. C. J. Reed, Mrs. David C. Lewis, Miss Martha Hoyt, Mrs. Morton Insley, Mrs. John K. Kollock, Miss Olga von Deslon, Miss Margaret Walter, Miss Frances Wilson, Miss Miriam Strong, Miss Grace Warren, Miss Claire Houghton, Miss Marjorie Hoffman and Miss Leslie Knapp.

Punch was served by Mrs. Cyrus A. Dolph and Mrs. Frank A. Knapp. Mrs. Houghton received in a black striped grenadine over white chiffon, the bodice elaborated with white chintilly lace and worn with a necklace of amethysts. Mrs. Robert Howard was in her handsome Empire wedding gown of shimmering white satin. Miss Claire Houghton in a gown of mirage silk, of the new gullberry shade, trimmed with panne velvet of same tint, and cut on the modified Directoire line. Miss Effie Houghton wore a striking gown, which was built on the same lines as her sister's costume, though made of a sky-blue Rajah, the corsage composed of Irish lace, and she carried an enormous bouquet of brides' buds. Mrs. Cyrus A. Dolph was distinguished in a delicate gray satin trimmed with rose point, with which she wore a handsome old cameo necklace.

The following clipping appeared in the Paris-American Journal of August 20: Newcomers to the colony. Our American colony has had an important addition. Mrs. Dosh, wife of Colonel Henry Dosh, of Portland, Or., and Seattle, her charming daughters, the Misses Lillian and Camille, a younger daughter and a son, have come to stay a long time. This is a most interesting cosmopolitan family. Mrs. Dosh, member of a prominent old French Burgundy family, was born at Beaune, at a fortified ancient chateau belonging to her family. Her parents took her to America when she was still a young child. She was brought up a thorough American, though never for-
