THAT residents of Portland are becoming more and more acquainted with the inestimable value of the night school connected with the Y. M. C. A. of this city, is evidenced by the increasing attendance at every term. The school is popularly known as the "Employed Man's College," and was organized solely to offer most thorough and practical instruction to assist the young man in ascertaining what trade or vocation he is fitted for in life, and also to be a help to the man in the business in which he is employed. Under the individual instruction of an expert and practical teacher the student may take any one class or any number of classes he desires; may take up his subject at any point from which the most benefit will be derived, and may begin at any time he chooses.

The night school was inaugurated 11 years ago, and since that time over 5000 men, between the ages of 16 and 60 have taken advantage of the practical educational work. As before stated, the number of students is yearly growing, last season there being 736 men enrolled, and the prospects for this season's attendance being considerably larger. Manual training was introduced into the school in 1901. More and different branches have been added from time to time. Laboratories have been installed for assaying, chemistry and electricity, and shop classes in plumbing, carpentry and power motors have been instituted. Lumbering and forestry, real estate law, surveying and mapping, telegraphy, train dispatching, modern languages, taught by conversational methods, salesmanship and show-card writing may be mentioned among the many classes which have been formed. From time to time as the occasion arises others will be organized. Young men by the hundreds have been fitted for special work in these lines, and have been given an especial thoroughness and efficiency in the line which they pursue in their instructions. The most marked development has been along these industrial lines, although one branch of the English classes is worthy of special mention. It is that which is popularly known as the "Map of Europe class." On an average of from 60 to 100 men, representatives of nearly every nationality in Europe, congregate nightly to study the English language. Those who have practically no knowledge of our tongue make up the membership of one class, and those using English imperfectly, both in speaking and writing, seek perfection in the other. Here are gathered together Poles, Italians, Finns, Hungarians, Swedes, Danes, Russians, etc. The amount of good accomplished by this class can readily be imagined.

Instructors Are Experts.

It has been the aim of the Association to provide their corps of instructors from those who are actively engaged during the day in the occupation in which they give instruction during the evening. In this way it has been ascertained that the most practical results have been obtained. So it is that in the plumbing course the instructor was city plumbing inspector of Portland for years, and is now the head of a large plumbing firm; the teacher of carpentry is foreman for contracting firm; the general manager of a lumber agency is the instructor of the lumbering and forestry class. And so it goes throughout the entire list; the teachers are chosen with a view to giving thoroughly practical instruction of the most up-to-date methods. Thirty-four of these specialists are now employed for the evening class work, and three cultured and intelligent foreigners conduct a day school of modern languages, using conversational methods in their instructions. Instructors for the coming season have just been appointed. The school is under the direction of M. A. Kew, and embraces the following teaching talent: Merwin Pugh, of the City Engineer's office, bookkeeping and correspondence; Hopkins Jenkins, of the city schools, arithmetic; W. A. Turnbull, carpentry and wood-work; C. L. Proebstel, chemist and assayer, chemistry; A. S. Wells, mining and assaying; J. W. Anderson, commercial artist, show-card writing; J. A. Wesco, penmanship; Contracting Plumber Thomas E. Hulme, plumbing; E. J. Hadley, juvenile court, boy's English; I. J. Merrill, mechanical engineer, mechanical drawing; J. H. Cowan, vocal music; A. E. Beaman, telegraphy and dispatching; A. Ralph Velez, Spanish; T. G. Frubel, German; M. G. Steel, city schools, manual training; Attorney H. M. Montgomery, civics and English; E. E. Dickey, foreign English; G. V. Green, mathematics and English; D. W. Proebstel, advanced and elementary electricity; Mrs. Ivan B. Rhodes, shorthand and typewriting.

The fees are merely nominal, and seem ridiculously low. They range from $1.50 to $10 per term of three months, with the exception of some of the highly technical subjects, requiring an additional expenditure for instruction and material. To keep the fees within the easy reach of all is the purpose of the school.

Only a few hours per evening during the long nights of the coming Winter devoted to instruction and application in the Portland "Busy Man's College" is sure to reap rewards which cannot be overestimated. The Fall term of the night school will begin Monday, September 28.

Although the management of the Y. M. C. A. is religious, the religious affiliation of its members is not inquired into. It is absolutely a non-sectarian institution in its workings, and is open for membership to any self-respecting young man. Here the wealthy man's heir and the poor man's son vie with each other in the handball court or on the running track of the gymnasium. The organization knows no class or religious distinction. It is open to all, and instead of being an exclusive club is rather an inclusive one.

STOCK MARKET WEAKENS
Heavy Selling of Reading and Hariman Works Slump.

PROBE AT LOS ANGELES
Grand Jury Will Investigate County Officers.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 19.—According to a morning paper, the county grand jury which convened today will begin a rigorous investigation that may be productive of startling results, into four departments of the county and city government—the Sheriff's office, board of supervisors, police department and the police commission.

It is claimed much evidence of a convincing nature is ready for presentation to the grand jury. The inquiry into the Sheriff's office is said to have to do with the charges for the feeding of county and Federal prisoners and to charges for mileage and other items in expense accounts of deputies. The Federal authorities, through District Attorney Oscar Lawler, recently made a thorough investigation of the Sheriff's office in the matter of the care of Federal prisoners, and the report was forwarded to Attorney-General Bonaparte. It is not known what result will come of that.

The investigation into the records of the board of supervisors, it is stated, will also have to do with expense accounts of several members of the board.

The charges against the police department and the police commission have not been disclosed in detail, but accusations of paid protection for certain violators of the law are said to be at the bottom.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Prices on the Stock Exchange showed extreme weakness in the recession which marked today's trading. The opening had been fairly firm, but before the end of the first hour all gains were wiped out, and in the final half hour a heavy selling movement caused losses of two points or more in all the active issues. There was heavy selling of Reading, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, chiefly from traders who have been on the bear side of the market the last few days. Still there was an utter absence of definite news to account for the break, but in market circles it was believed that the slump might be attributed to political conditions. The market was showing only slight recovery at the close.

It was compiled by Philip F. Jacobs, assistant secretary of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.
