STRONG BILL FOR ORPHEUM

Many Good Features on This Week's Programme.

The bill at the Orpheum the past week was an excellent one and the house was packed nightly, the screams of laughter and outbursts of enthusiasm from the audience were the best encouragement in the world to the performers behind the footlights.

The headliner is Jesse L. Lasky's "Military Octet" and "The Girl With the Baton," a musical production, and is one of the costliest and most pretentious novelties in vaudeville.

The Three Dancing Mitchells, are colored entertainers, who have long been associated with Black Patti, Ernest Hogan and the Williams and Walker shows, and for characteristic dancing of their race they have few equals.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Beane are presenting "A Woman's Way." Mr. Beane will be remembered by many for his playing in Hoyt's comedies a dozen years ago, and the reputation he then made.

Miss Mabel Sinclair is considered England's foremost lady ventriloquist and she comes to the Orpheum circuit from the London Pavilion where she was exceedingly popular.

The Three Dancing Mitchells, are colored entertainers, who have long been associated with Black Patti, Ernest Hogan and the Williams and Walker shows, and for characteristic dancing of their race they have few equals.

And for the coming week, commencing tomorrow with the matinee, there will be a particularly strong programme. Mlle. Louise and her troupe of high school monkeys will be the headline attraction.

The great Lester is a ventriloquist who can carry on a conversation with his dumplings, string of drink and smoke cigarettes all at the same time.
