ILLUMINE THE WAY FOR ALL VOTERS

Oregon to Be Flooded With Literature of Both Great Parties.

CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION

Battle of Booklets Bound to Rage Fiercely From Now Until the Ballots Are Counted at National Election Next Month.

From this time on until the election in November, Oregon is to be showered with political pamphlets by both parties. It is to be a campaign of education and enlightenment. The printed page will appeal to voters to mark their ballots right November 3. It is manifestly impossible for all voters of the state to listen to the spellbinders who will be out during October, but there is no reason why every voter should not get a double handful of campaign brochures from each party, for there are plenty to go around, and if John Jones, out at Jones Crossing or Jonesville, does not get a stack of this epic campaign reading, it is his own fault, for it is here for him. Enough is available to give each and every man, woman and child a liberal education on the campaign controversies.

During the past few days the Republican State Central Committee sent out 50,000 pieces of literature calculated to fire the reader with enthusiasm for the big election. The Democrats have shipped out tons of their literature. This mass of information has gone out to the various county chairmen for distribution to the people of the different sections of the state. Around the circle of soap boxes in the country grocery stores the pamphlets are being distributed. Campaign arguments that are wont to be waged between neighbors. If a Bryan supporter dares to flaunt Taft's labor record in the face of a Republican, the latter will point triumphantly to one of the campaign booklets, except "The Labor Decisions of Judge Taft," upon reading which anyone will be convinced that labor owes everything it has to the benign and bulky candidate.

As to Bank Guaranty.

On the other hand, let some opponent of the Democratic candidate scorn the bank guaranty proposition, and then one of the faithful will bring out a booklet issued by the Democrats giving Bryan's speech on that subject, and this so conclusively settles the question that after reading it, one is satisfied that this is the only solution for present financial evils.

For this campaign literature is like a campaign speaker. It is extremely plausible and convincing. If the intelligent voter reads the pamphlets sent out by both parties, he will be wholly incapable of making up his mind as to which side is telling the truth. Not one of these booklets leaves any ground for argument, but settles the question with which it deals once and for all. Happily, the average voter will read only those books issued by his own party and with which he is in sympathy, desiring, it time wasted to apply himself to the task of absorbing the ammunition of the opposition.

The campaign literature is full of large words and high-sounding phrases. It is calculated to dazzle the reader with its verbal pyrotechnics and leave him convinced on any subject dealt with when for the life of him, he could not tell a single cause of his conviction.

It is Tiresome Literature.

The pamphlet is verbose and tedious. The issue of one party declares that the contention it supports is "in line with the enlightened public sentiment of the day and is demanded for the betterment of the condition of mankind." But on the other hand, the pamphlet of the other party, dealing with the same beneficent proposition, will declare, "It is a sinister menace to the progress and prosperity of our common country."

mand for campaign literature from the voters. The Republicans have dispensed unnumbered sheets of this sort of argument and a big batch arrived during the past week to fill up the yawning storage-room at headquarters. The Democratic campaign managers wired to headquarters yesterday for 20,000 more copies of the speech of Bryan on the bank guaranty, while his printed remarks on the tariff and the trusts are almost as numerous as Autumn leaves. It appears to be a neck and neck race between the two parties as to which one shall deluge the voters with the most campaign literature, the idea being that the side which scores heaviest in this way will carry the state.

Voter Has Hands Full.

From now on, everybody will have to be on the lookout to sidestep the campaign booklet. An able-bodied man, strong enough to do useful work, was busy yesterday distributing Democratic pamphlets among the high and the low. Instead of being handed candidates' cards, the voter is going to have his hands full of this political literature. But it is thought this mass of the voters will not do much damage. Democrats will read Democratic pamphlets and Taft men will read Taft's speeches. They will serve to fortify argumentative voters with such facts as they contain, a rare find in such books. But they will change very few in their political beliefs. It is thought, like the big lithographs of the candidates, they minister largely to party pride and keep up party loyalty.

SEATTLE ORATOR IS COMING

Judge Will H. Thompson Will Make Republican Speeches in Oregon.

Will H. Thompson, of Seattle, has been enlisted in the Republican campaign in this state, and will make an address in support of Taft's candidacy on October 12. Secretary McArthur, of the state committee, has not yet made arrangements for a hall, but the place of the meeting will be announced later. Mr. Thompson is a gifted orator, and will be well worth hearing. He is an ex-Congress soldier, but is warm in his support of the Republican ticket. Secretary McArthur is busy arranging the speaking tours of the various orators who will be sent out during October. Senator Fulton will open his tour Wednesday night of this week at Forest Grove. He will then go to Crook County, and in a large number of Eastern Oregon towns, including Moro, Condon, Heppner and Prineville. He will speak in the Willamette Valley cities and in the Southern Oregon late in the campaign.

Wallace McCamant, M. C. George and Judge R. G. Morrow, of Portland, R. E. Butler, of Condon, and Congressman William R. Ellis, of Pendleton, are to take the stump for Taft during the month and stir up interest in the approaching election. W. A. Williams, of Portland, spoke last night at Canyon City, and is booked for Tuesday night at Yale.

The campaign management believes that when these speakers get out and get into action, the last trace of lethargy, that for a time looked ominous over the ticket, will have vanished, and the voters will swing into line for the party.

WILL STUDY SOCIOLOGY

Mrs. E. P. Mossman to Conduct Class at Y. W. C. A.

A class in sociology is being planned for the winter months under the leadership of Mrs. E. P. Mossman. This class will meet at the Young Women's Christian Association the first and third Tuesdays of each month at 7:30 o'clock to study Josiah Strong's book "The Challenge of the Cities." Mrs. Mossman has for years past given her thought to the subject of sociology and has had much practical experience in the welfare work. In Rainier a most enthusiastic club of young girls was organized for sewing, cooking and Bible work and a group of them went to the Northwest Y. W. C. A. conference under Mrs. Mossman's chaperonage. She led a successful class in the "Challenge of the Cities" at that conference.

Portland circles will know Mrs. Mossman through her connection with the Art Class which she helped organize and of which she was president for seven years, and also as associate president of the North Pacific Presbyterian Board of Missions.

The class in sociology is free to all men and women and there is no membership requirement. A special investigation of labor conditions in Portland will be made along scientific lines. Suggestion is made that leaders of similar classes will find the study, as Mrs. Mossman will present it, a real inspiration for their own work.

There is an average of nearly two persons killed each day in New York City by falling from windows, down steps, into excavations or in some such manner.

FEW SHOOT LIMIT

Local Nimrods Have Bad Luck in Bagging Pheasants.

BIG RAID BEFORE SEASON

Mongolians Not So Numerous as in Former Years, Because State Cannot Afford to Spend Money to Protect the Birds.

BY W. J. PETRAIN.

The open season on upland birds began last Thursday, but to date comparatively few limit bags of pheasants have been reported. In some sections this is attributed to the shooting of the birds out of season, which is made possible because of the inability of the state to employ enough game wardens to patrol every district. In fact it has been reported that the raids made upon the wild fowl previous to the opening of the season were far more pronounced this year than ever before, and on this account the Oregon Fish and Game Association will endeavor to secure more stringent laws governing game protection.

A few sportsmen have returned from their rural excursions with good bags, but they reported the birds extremely wild, and attribute their luck to routing coveys unaware.

Lloyd Miller was one who succeeded in bagging the limit in one day. His good fortune is an exception, for many hundreds returned footsore, weary and empty handed. Some even failed to get a shot.

Among the latter was Ed Schiller. He visited his ranch near Gresham, but all he got was a shot at a stray tomcat.

Accompanied by Buck Keith, C. B. Williams, Will Van Arnam, George Bills and one or two others, Schiller will leave for Arlington in the near future, and at that paradise of the wild goose the bunch expect to have glorious sport.

Jack Callison, Dr. George Amelle, Harry Ellis, Moose Abraham, Will Lipman, F. T. Chadbourne and George M. Crane visited the country on the first and each returned with from four to nine or ten fancy birds.

C. G. Sutherland and J. D. Honeyman are two sportsmen who went as far south as Albany in the endeavor to bag a few of the "Mongolians," but they returned disappointed. Mr. Sutherland is indignant at the flagrant violation of the law which had been carried on in that vicinity previous to October 1. According to him the hunters of the birds had been shot over to such an extent that he was unable to secure up as much as a limit bag.

According to early reports comparatively few birds will reward the marksmen who invade the country districts in pursuit of their favorite pastime. However, duck hunters have reported good bags right along, and it is possible that the huntersmen will give their attention to the loathsome fowls along the shooting grounds of the Columbia River basin, instead of invading the pheasant retreats.

WOULD CURB SOCIAL EVIL

Woman Writer Favors Enforcement of Restricted District.

PORTLAND, Oct. 3.—(To the Editor.)—When The Oregonian touches on the race problem, its words make my heart leap for joy, to know that there are mediums, with clear vision, to voice the thoughts of obscure, though thinking people. And the editorial that appeared in last Friday's Oregonian, touching on the social evil, was indeed a gem.

A GOOD PLACE TO TRADE

to abolish the social evil, in our day and age of the world, would be an impossibility. This stand seems reasonable to those who have given the subject any serious consideration. No process but growth alone will change an individual soul, and until that time arrives, we must resort to expedients to control existing conditions. We women who have been born under the best conditions this stunted world can give, and are virtuous without merit, because the tendency to purity is in accord with our constitution—how can we judge of the passion-tossed inhabitants of the under world, who are not to blame for their low heritage or for being born, as has already been stated, in that environment?

I recently lived in an apartment house, where my next-door neighbor looked to be an aristocratic colonial dame. Her most frequent midnight caller turned out to be a married deacon in a down-town church. Now, this is the class whose insidious and secret influence, poisonous and deadly, does more to undermine the moral standing of our community than a segregated district. These are the people who should pay the penalty for the gross infraction of the laws of decency—not the poor, half-human creatures who make no pretense to purity and high living.

If we must have a fallen class, do not scatter them; keep the district within bounds, somewhere under close surveillance. If arrests are made, make these among the people who practice the social evil under the cloak of respectability and religion, and include them also in this prescribed territory under strict regulation.

Came to Oregon in 1847.

NEWBERG, Or., Oct. 2.—(Special.)—J. L. Kinney, a pioneer of 1847, died at his home on the farm in Upper Chehalis Valley on Thursday, October 1, at the age of 69. The deceased came from Iowa to Oregon and spent his life on the farm where he died. He leaves three sons and two daughters, Frank and Fred, who live on the farm; Ray, who lives at Prineville; Mrs. Maude Ferguson, of Newberg, and Mrs. Maude Morsback, of Sherwood. The remains will be laid to rest on Sunday afternoon in the West Chehalis Cemetery.

WOMAN'S EXCHANGE MEETS

Miss Failing Reads Interesting Paper at Annual Session.

The annual meeting of the directors of the Woman's Exchange was held last Monday, September 28.—In addition to the rendering of a financial statement, several very interesting letters were read. The statement showed a total receipt of $12,565.06, of which, $10,075.00 was paid to consignors; the balance of $2,520 being amount paid to employees and for general expenses. She stated that there is a large proportion of the general public somewhat ignorant as to the purposes of this institution. It is, she stated, more particularly to render assistance to those women who need to earn money, who are, perhaps, unfitted by education and training, or owing to family cares, to go out into the world, but who are nevertheless skilled in the womanly arts of needlework and cooking. In this way they are enabled to take their products to the exchange, and at a nominal charge of 10 per cent, have them disposed of in a manner and at a profit it would be impossible for them to secure if left to their individual efforts. Of course the 10 per cent commission would be totally inadequate to cover the expense of carrying on this work; but with the proceeds of a daintily-served luncheon of home-cooked food and with the aid of subscriptions and a generous public the institution is able to make ends meet. The annual benefit, which it is necessary to hold every year will this season be held in Murlark Hall, on October 14.
