him. They would not be grateful if they did not. They would not have much sense if they did not, for they know that if I am elected, the spike will be put on the big criminals as well as the little ones and therefore they are for him. I am glad to have the trust magnates against me, but I could have had them on my side had I been willing to sell the American people to the trust magnates. I have them against me because I prefer to fight for things that the people need and I am fighting for them not merely because I think a trust hurts the generation that I have children and I have grandchildren, and I would be ashamed to look them in the face if I was willing to barter away the liberties of the people and sell this Nation to the industrial bondage to a few great trust magnates. And that is what is being done in this country today. There might have been some excuse in years ago for a man to vote the Republican ticket because he did not know what was going on. But the Republican leaders have been working both sides of the road. They have been working out here with promises, but they have been caught with the goods on this year, and any man who votes the Republican ticket now, votes it knowing that the party has betrayed the masses and will do it again if it is trusted with power.

could 'buy' a baby to brighten their home. "The way in which the public responded to our call for help has been a source of great gratification to us," said P. S. Akin, secretary of the Baby Home. "There were no un-pleasant circumstances and there was nothing but the most cordial reception on the part of all citizens. "Sometimes, when subscriptions for charity are taken, people are likely to think they are being asked for too much and then sometimes another organization may think that the soliciting one is infringing on its rights. But in this case there was nothing of the kind. Every one worked in harmony, there were no jealousies except perhaps a small rivalry as to who could raise the most money. "The directors of the Home have only the deepest gratitude to the people of Hood River for their generosity. "Members of the Commercial Club who take luncheon at the 'Knicker's table' are proud of their achievement in the baby cause. At noon yesterday tags were distributed and 318 worth were sold. A crusade reluctantly agreed to try to raise $25. At 8 o'clock last night she had sold $210 worth of tags and sent for 100 more. "At the Nortonia Hotel Mrs. William Knight began work early in the day. At the breakfast table she sold $96 worth of tags. "We wish to thank our friends and the various fraternal organizations who so kindly sympathized with us during the illness and death of our loved ones. Harvey C. Wells and Rosamond B. Simonson; also for the beautiful floral offerings. "L. WELLS AND FAMILY. MARY WELLS AND FAMILY. IDA B. SIMONSON.

HOOD RIVER'S NEW REVIVAL ORGANIZE UNIVERSITY CLUB WITH 88 MEMBERS. Fourth City in Pacific Northwest to Boast of Organization of College Men. HOOD RIVER, Or., Oct. 31.—(Special.)—Hood River is the fourth city in the Pacific Northwest to organize a University Club. At the first annual banquet on October 17, the charter membership roll was closed with a total of 88 signatures. Seated at the banquet were 72 of the 88 members. Hood River, with a population of 300 people, believes it has established a unique record in the organization of such a club. All the larger universities in the United States, with one or two exceptions are represented in the membership roll. Requirements for membership in the Hood River University Club are the same as demanded by the University Club of Portland. The four cities in the Pacific Northwest which support university clubs are: Portland, Seattle, Spokane and Tacoma. E. H. Shepard, editor of Better Fruit, and a successful apple and berry grower here, was the first to start the movement for organization of the University, and the success he met with, was a surprise to himself and friends. Mr. Shepard was assisted in the organization work by J. E. Hall. The club has already arranged for quarters in one of the several brick structures being erected in this city. Fluctuated Up and Down to Suit Parisian Youngster's Fancy. PARIS, Oct. 31.—(Special.)—All visitors to Paris know the little Savoyard boys who prance about the boulevards and the terraces of the Montmartre cafes at night selling their statuettes. They are sharp little lads, and known to be quite unscrupulous in the prices they ask for their wares. The other evening one of them offered a plaster statuette for $1. The customer suggested 5 cents. "Give me 10 cents for it and it's yours," said the boy. "I'll give you 5 cents," said the customer. "No, 10 cents," said the lad again. But at that moment the statuette fell out of the purchaser's hands and smashed itself to pieces. "Well, now I suppose I must pay you," and the man put 10 cents down. "Ah, now the boy said, 20 cents is my price." "But a minute ago you said you would take 10 cents for it," said the customer. "I know I did," said the Savoyard. "But a minute ago you might have refused to buy, and now that you have broken it you've got to pay for it." He got the 20 cents.
