Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Whitehouse observed the anniversary of their golden wedding with a large reception and tea followed by an informal evening at their home on Kearney street. The afternoon reception and tea was a formal affair and included Mrs. Whitehouse's calling list which is a lengthy one for she has resided here ever since her marriage and has hosts of friends. In the reception-room the decorations were especially pretty with a color scheme of yellow chrysanthemums and Oregon grape. A note of interest was lent by the display of miniatures of Mr. and Mrs. Whitehouse painted at the time of their wedding. The floral gifts were beautiful and quite filled the rooms. Mrs. Whitehouse was distinguished in a black lace robe over white satin with a coronet of gold leaves in her coiffure. Receiving with her was Mrs. Morris Homans Whitehouse, a recent bride, who was gowned in a pink satin of directoire model. Also receiving were Mrs. Edward Cookingham, who was in white lace, and Mrs. J. A. Sladen, whose gown was of white cloth. Mrs. Edward Leavitt Brown, who assisted, wore a handsome gown of taupe velvet.

The dining-room was decorated with white flowers and a profusion of bride roses on the tea tables. These were presided over by Mrs. H. W. Corbett, Mrs. Rodney Glisan, Mrs. Raleigh Stott and Mrs. Philip C. Schuyler, assisted by Miss Susan Stott and Miss Inez Barbrett. In the library, which was in golden yellow, with masses of violets on the tables, ices were served by Mrs. C. E. S. Wood and Miss Mary Failing, assisted by Miss Berti Baar.

Assisting in the reception-room were Mrs. Edward Leavitt Brown, Mrs. W. C. Alvord, Mrs. William Crowell, of Boston, Mrs. Wallace McCamant, Miss Glisan, Mrs. David T. Honeyman, Miss Frances Lewis and Mrs. James Canby.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitehouse have four children and six grandchildren. Of the children, Morris Homans Whitehouse, Mrs. Edward Cookingham and Mrs. Edward Leavitt Brown were present. The eldest daughter, Mrs. H. Hoster, Jr., who resides in the East, was unable to be present on this occasion.

This week Mr. and Mrs. Morris Homans Whitehouse will be domiciled in their home at Twenty-second and Kearney streets.
