THREE WOMEN PROMINENT IN THE PUBLIC EYE—ONE A WRITER, ONE A SOCIETY WOMAN, THE THIRD AN HEIRESS

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(Special.)—Here are pictures and notes about three prominent women, the first an heiress, the second a society woman, and the third a writer: Mrs. Keith Donaldson, who is suing for divorce, was Evelyn Hunter, the heiress to $1,000,000 left by her Texas uncle some years ago. Her husband is a Philadelphian. They were married less than three years ago. The contents of their beautiful Fifty-sixth-street house is being offered for sale at auction this week.

Mrs. Albert Clifford Barney is a former Washingtonian now living in Paris. In America she was known for her delightful entertaining and her eccentricity. She went to Paris to join the artist colony and her paintings are reported as highly original—in fact so original as to be the subject of controversy.

Maude Howe Elliott, who has just published "Sun and Shadow in Spain," is a Bostonian and daughter of Julia Ward Howe. She married John Elliott an artist in 1887. In literature she is still Maude Howe. Mrs. Elliott has published two books on Italy. One is "Roma Beats" and the other "Two in Italy." She has the faculty of narrating personal experience in foreign lands in an entertaining way and yet not making her narration a mass of trivial details; so that her books of travel are not rewritten Baedekers and still are informative as well as entertaining. Mrs. Elliott has spent much time abroad but she calls Boston her home.

Dogs Trained as Caddies.

Oxford (Pa.) Dispatch. If Oxford, Pa., ever achieves any particular degree of fame it will probably be as the birthplace of the caddy hound, a new breed of dogs which promises to revolutionize present golfing methods. These dogs will perform all the duties of a caddy on the golf green.

The breeder is Frank Duburow, a rural mail carrier, who breeds fox hounds and beagles.

Knowing that golf balls were often lost because caddies did not follow their flight, he trained fox hounds to chase balls and locate them.

The only difficulty found was to keep them from picking up the ball and retrieving it. This defect was remedied and the players were delighted with the intelligence of the animals.

Duburow found that his work was not done, however, for a caddy was still necessary to carry the clubs about. He took two dogs, half-bred collies and fox hounds, and trained them for a month, when they would do all that his fox hounds had done, and in addition carry the caddy bag strapped to their backs.

Fingers and Toes to Spare.

Wall (South Dakota) Dispatch to the New York World.

When it was announced in the Wall Record that a boy baby with six fingers on each hand and six toes on each foot had been born to Colonel and Mrs. Weatherby, of that place, the colonel was filled with a pride uncommon even among new fathers. Colonel Weatherby himself has six well-developed fingers on his left hand and six toes on each foot. He says that extra fingers and toes can be found in his family for five generations back.

"But," says the colonel, "this baby is what I call normal. He is the first one of the family to have two sets of six. Now that he is balanced all around he makes rather a fit youngster."

"I am expecting great things of the boy, especially if he has any musical talent. Think what he would do on the harp with 12 fingers, for example. Why, he would discover harmonies never before known to the world. I am not much on music, but even if I had been, with five fingers on one hand and six on the other I would get some of the notes crossed."

"Or if the boy doesn't take to music, wouldn't he shine on a typewriter, or one of these printing machines that look like a typewriter and spit out sticks of type? I tell you, watch my boy Jim."
