

HEARST'S PAPER ROOSEVELT ORGAN

Sudden Outburst of Praise for Former Enemy Surprises and Alarms Politicians.

HEAPS SCORN ON CONGRESS

President's Character Is Shown by Attacks of Trust Jackals—Building Up Frankenstein to Plague Them.

ST. LOUIS, F. LONERGAN.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—(Special.)—Politicians are rubbing their eyes with amazement on finding that William Randolph Hearst's excitable Evening Journal has assumed the position of "Roosevelt organ" in Greater New York.

Known by His Enemies. Theodore Roosevelt has been President of the United States almost eight years. He has made mistakes—a good many.

House Feels Truth. "Roosevelt told the truth about the House of Representatives. He said that they were afraid of the Secret Service spies because they committed crimes that they don't want unearthed.

Provide Enough Officers. Only Way Secretary Wright Sees to Get Army Work Done. WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—I am convinced that the only remedy for the absence of today's session of the House is to provide enough officers on the active list of the Army to perform all of the duties required of it.

Talks of Things in General. House Discusses Trusts, Lawmakers and Postal Banks. WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—An elaborate analysis of the Sherman anti-trust law, by Jenkins, of Wisconsin, was the feature of today's session of the House.

Will Not Intervene in China. WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—It is authoritatively denied in responsible quarters that intervention in Chinese affairs is contemplated in any action taken by the United States.

Notorious Woman Jailed. Marion Young, "Lady Hold-up," Is Arrested in Montana. KALISPELL, Mont., Jan. 16.—(Special.)—Marion Young, badly wanted in Seattle for holding up and robbing a man, was arrested here today by Sheriff O'Connell.

Child Dies from Burns. ASTORIA, Jan. 16.—(Special.)—Agnes Burns, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Burns, who was severely burned when the family home was destroyed on Thursday, died late last evening.

Hearst Unwelcome Ally. Republican politicians are not inclined to disagree with this editorial for publication.

HOPKINS HOPKINS BACK TO ILLINOIS

Senator Ready to Battle for Toga and Confident of His Re-election.

HAS MAJORITY PLEDGED

Candidate Both of Primaries and Convention, Hopkins Says He Is Not Worrying—Swarm of Other Candidates.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—(Special.)—United States Senator Albert J. Hopkins, candidate for re-election in one of the hottest political fights in the history of Illinois, hopped east back from Washington today to see if his toga was on straight.

ROBBERS PLAN KIDNAPING

Expect to Hold Brewer Captive Until Ransomed, but Deal Falls.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 16.—That it was the intention of two safecrackers to kidnap Valentine Blatz, one of the heads of a Milwaukee brewery, is the story told by the watchman of the brewery.

George Ketcham. NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—(Special.)—George Ketcham was for years owner and driver of the famous trotter Cresceus.

Invited to Drive Great Trotter Cresceus. The Senate accuses him of dishonesty, because in the panic, when the Nation was frightened and only the big thieves were at their ease, Roosevelt hesitated to make confusion and panic worse at that particular moment.

through the cracks between the boards and often drove me to my bed for days with grippe, tonsillitis or frightful colds. I was a city man, college bred and unused to hardships. But I stuck to my task, and the work I have accomplished speaks for itself.

"Gradually my eyes became opened to a wonderful opportunity in the valley. I saw that the great body of timber was practically inaccessible to the Columbia River except by means of a stream known as Major Creek. I managed to secure the water right to this creek, thus virtually tying up millions upon millions of feet of valuable timber upon land which is worth more than it is worth while covered with timber. How to develop this vast project was my problem.

"With my savings from my salary I secured an option on some fruit land which I sold at a good profit. With this money and with a few thousand dollars I succeeded in raising from some of my old clients, whose confidence I managed to regain, I put in a complete sawmill, equipped it with machinery and started work, giving employment to several men and supplying the district with lumber. I soon found, however, that I would need $100,000 more to buy timber and develop my proposition.

"After struggling along for months to solicit help from my clients, with little encouragement, I look the train to Minneapolis in December to see certain leading lumbermen there with whom I was acquainted. I promised them that if they would invest the $100,000 needed, I would give them a full lien upon all the assets and would pay

IN CHARGE OF THE INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT-ELECT TAFT.

E. J. Stellwagen. WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—(Special.)—E. J. Stellwagen has been in charge of the inauguration of President-elect Taft, that is, he is at the head of the local committee which has it in charge.

Large Crop of Competitors. If the Hopkins people can force 103 Republicans into the Legislature into a caucus, they can make the work of the caucus binding. While the candidate from Aurora declared that he would eliminate all competitors on the first joint ballot, many candidates were springing up in all parts of the state. Here is the list of the men in the field, with or without their consent.

Congressman George E. Foss, Congressman William B. McKinley, Congressman Frank O. Lowden, Honorable William C. Mason, Governor Charles S. Deneen, Postmaster Daniel A. Campbell, Robert T. Lincoln, J. Ogden Armour, W. J. Calahan, Honorable William E. D. Shurtzoff, Richard Yates, Lieutenant-Governor Lawrence V. Sherman.

Mr. Armour, Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Palmer are the candidates who were brought forward by Republican legislators merely as men they would vote for rather than to see Senator Hopkins re-elected.

DORR WILL SUE TILLMAN

(Continued From First Page.) have a Chief Executive like President Roosevelt. "When I learned last February that Senator Tillman had applied through Reeder & Watkins to purchase several quarter sections of land under the terms of the Coolidge wagon road grant, while openly aiding in the prosecution of the claim to be the rightful owners, I at once made the facts public. I had no reason to suspect that Senator Tillman desired his connection with the matter to be kept secret. Indeed, it was Senator Tillman's very association with the project which convinced me that the opportunity was a fine one and an excellent investment.

"When I advertised the facts, as I understood them, recommending the investment to my clients on the ground that Senator Tillman had made a mistake, I was pressing the case in the Senate. I did not imagine that he would attempt to cover his tracks. As it was, without warning to me, my client Senator Tillman arose in the Senate chamber and denounced me publicly as a liar, a swindler, and a fraud, and demanded that the Postoffice Department investigate the matter. Acting upon his recommendation the postal authorities at once issued an order to withhold delivery of my mail, and I found myself in a strange city, almost without friends to whom I could turn.

"I had come to Portland from St. Paul only a few weeks before and had applied with the intention of going into the timber business. When I started, I had what would have been a powerful clientele behind me, and had secured admission to the University Club and had hoped to become closely identified with the social, political and business life of Portland, my adopted home. When Senator Tillman's speech and the action of the Postoffice Department became notorious through the Associated Press reports, my fair weather friends deserted me, my clients entirely forsook me, and the clubs to which I had applied for admission refused to consider my application. My career seemed to be virtually ruined.

"What did it matter that in spite of the advice of an attorney, that I flee from the wrath of the mighty pitchfork, red hot with rage, I remained and faced the Government postal inspectors with a clear, straight-forward story, not only convincing them at once of my own blamelessness and innocence, but showing intent, but showing them the way to prove the truth of every statement which I made, especially as to Senator Tillman's duplicity and fraud? What matter that several months later my mail was returned to me, and a report sent to Washington that I had committed no act of fraud? That report was a "secret and privileged communication," they told me, as required by the regulations. No column articles appeared on the front pages of the great dailies to vindicate me, for good report craves few slowly.

"As a last resort, I left Portland in virtual disgrace, to begin life anew in a country village. My father and a corporation of which he was president owned a piece of land in the White Salmon Valley, Washington, and I was offered an opportunity on a small salary to superintend a gang of Japanese workmen in clearing the land and setting it to orchards.

"Throughout the long, cold Spring I lived in a tent perched on a four-foot wall of rough boards, upon a knoll 2000 feet above sea level, where the fierce wind blowing up the Columbia Valley whistled them back every dollar invested before I myself received a penny except my bare living expenses. I begged them at least to come out and investigate, assuring them on my honor that every word was true.

"Without an exception every one of them refused to have anything to do with me. Some said their money was tied up in other enterprises; others that they were planning improvements of their own; but in their eyes I could see the real answer written—that they would not confide in me on account of Senator Tillman's speech—that they believed me a liar, a swindler and a crook because he said so.
