CANNON JOSEPH G. CANNON - WHOM

GW YORK, March 27 .- (Special,)-This is the first picture made of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-first Congress. It was made by H. F. Raess at the opening session, March 15, when the fight on the organization of the House was made and the battle half lost by the insurgents. The lotory of the insurgents is of doubtful There was reason for postponing the fight on the rules, in that it would have delayed the consideration at this time of the tariff bill. But when this time of the tariff bill. But when the House meets in the first regular session next December, there will be the same reason—because of some legislation of importance—and there will also be less strength in the insurgent forces. It is quite possible to punish the insurgents in the making of the tariff bill, so that they will be glad enough to get into line with the Speaker in December: and "Uncle Joe" knows the possibilities of the situation and may be trusted to take advantage of them. Besides the time to force a change of the rules is when you can bring pressure to bear through the desire of your enponents to pass a particular bil of legislation, and this would seem to have been the time to force the House into a revision of the rules through fear of a failure of the tariff measure.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon may not be as oung as some, but he is strictly up-to-tate. He rides from his home to the cantol in an automobile every day. date. He rides from his home to the Capitol in an automobile every day. When Tom Reed was Speaker he walked and his big figure was one of the interesting sights of Pennsylvania avenue exting and and overy morning.

During the last strike he personally took charge of his forces on two figures—those of Clemenceau, the Prefect. Lepine is the Commissioner of Police, or Chief of Police for Paris: but his post is much more dignified than that of the chief of Police of one of our great cities. M. Lepine rides in victorias, wears the ribbon of the Legion, and is treated at official ceremonies as though he were one of the chief.

His authority is all the greater because of the personal respect in which is chief for his bravery.

PARIS, March 27 .- (Special.) -A delightful retort was overheard in a railway carriage on the suburban railway the other afternoon. Among the travelers were an elderly priest and three young men, who had the bad taste to chaff him. The priest was evidently a curate of a small country parish, and had both the roughness and the shrewdness of the countryman. "Have you heard the news?" one of the young men asked the cure.

"No." he replied. "I left home early. and have been out all day, so that I have had no time to read my paper."
"Well, then," said the young man, "you will be glad to hear that the devil is
