CASTRO RAVES AT HOSTILE POWERS

France and Britain Help to Strengthen Uncle Sam's Grip in Venezuela.

PLAYING INVALID

Dictator Tears Hair and Shows Wounds to Prove Cruelty of Deportation-Shakes Fist at Correspondents.

PARIS, April 24 .- (Special.) - What I cannot understand," declared the enraged Cipriano Castro, ex-President of Venezuela, a few minutes after he had arrived in his luxurious quarters in the newest and most expensive hotel in Paris, "is that two great European nations should so meekly have bowed down before the United States in the matter of the persecution of a poor political exile like myself. Do not these nations understand that they are facili-tating the grip of the United States, not only on Venezuela, but ultimately on a large part of Northern South America? Europe later on will realize its error, for its main interest in our part of the world is to keep the greedy hands of the North American Republic off our continent. off our continent.

Warning Aginst United States.

"The time is soon coming when England and France will recognize, though too late, the preponderating influence of the United States in many of the affairs of Colombia and Venezuela, where the whole number of Americans permanently settled amounts to a miserable 300. The Americans then will be content to answer that they operated in the open daylight with the tacit consent of all Europe."

This was the substance of the excited declaration which the ex-dictator made to declaration which the ex-dictator made to his visitors, though in many different manners. Sometimes he spoke with a weak voice, as he lay stretched on a couch almulating illness and making some of the callers think his condition was that of a desperate invalid. of a desperate invalid.

Sometimes he strutted feverishly up and down the room, raving and tearing his hair, tearing open his shirt to show the hideous scar left by the operation in order to prove that he really was suffering, when "through the cruelty of the United States," he was carried off his bed at Fort de France clad only in his night-clothes.

Then, again, he shook his fist in the faces of the American correspondents as he declared that the day was immi-nent when the stars and stripes would he spurned under the heel of United Republics of South America.
