McCray Refrigerators

Modern thought along sanitary lines and domestic science are so emphasizing the important relation between pure food and health that the McCray Refrigerator of 1909, which embodies all the latest improvements, would hardly be recognized as of the same genus as the old-fashioned zinc-lined "ice box." The McCray is the modern residence refrigerator—a high-class machine for the home—being used today in America's finest and most modern residences. Exterior case-work compares with that of the best medium-grade furniture pieces. The interior construction is built under the McCray patents—a principle that involves the most perfect system of ventilation and food preservation. We are Portland agents of the McCray Refrigerators. Orders taken for specially-constructed McCray refrigerators for residence and other purposes.

New Styles Brass and Iron Beds and Cribs

Displayed in our line of Brass Beds are a number of the newest styles—the plain square Mission effects and the heavy round tube styles with large post vases. These handsome designs are shown in the favored satin finish. In the Iron Beds are shown several new patterns in the rich Vernis Martin finish and also in the popular combination of cream and gold. Many new and attractive ornamental features are shown in these. In both the Brass and Iron Cribs are to be seen the same features in design and finish as in the larger beds.
