A BUNGALOW IN SHINGLES AND CLINKER BRICK

By The Bungalow Craft Co., 403 Chamber of Commerce, Los Angeles, Cal.

The combinations available in the Bungalow building are really not many, and one of the best and most attractive is the one shown in the illustration, of clinker bricks and shingles. There was a time when clinker bricks, which are much cheaper than shingles, which are thrown out as "culis" from the kiln with every burning, could be had for almost nothing. The bricks, which in fact, this is still the case in many towns where the artistic use of clinker has not been demonstrated, but let the value and rugged beauty of this construction get to be known in a town, and the price of the once-despised bricks soon to double the price of good, solid, well-made and regularly burnt brick.
In laying clinker brick (which are almost always a dark blue or nearly black or a very dark red), the pointing should be done with colored mortar and the joints should be struck smooth, but from a quarter to a half inch deep. No attempt should be made to make smooth or regular surfaces, but beyond the demands of strength and solidity, it points stick out, or if the pointing lines, either vertical or horizontal, waver like a snake, and it broken on the joints, it is all the better for the artistic standpoint—in fact, a small cobble-stone stuck in here and there is a much-admired variation.
In the bungalow here shown the outer walls are shingled and the trim is all unshingled. The entire wood exterior is stained. The floor plan needs little comment except to note that the engraver has placed it crosswise instead of as it would naturally be placed, up and down; however, this will only necessitate turning the paper sidewise, which reminds me of an old Irishman I once knew, who could not read at all, but was very fond of making a bluff at it.
One day I saw him apparently interested in a newspaper, but on closer inspection I found the paper was upside down.
Calling his attention to the matter, he rather astonished me by remarking, "Sure, a good thing can read the paper any old way."
The interior of this house shows five good big rooms, well arranged, and four big closets. The end of the living room, with fireplace and seats, hints at great possibilities for cozy arrangement.

The dining-room has a high paneled wainscot and plate-rail and two quaint old-fashioned corner china closets. The living-room has a beamed ceiling. This house has a frontage of 28 feet and a depth of 50 feet, including porch, and cost $1150 complete, including plumbing, electric lighting, painting, staining and tinting.

CALLED TO NEW FIELD

FATHER DONNELLY WILL TAKE UP WORK IN PORTLAND.

Coos Bay Priest Who Performed Great Task for Church in Large Territory.

MARSHFIELD, Or., May 8.—(Special.)—Rev. Father Edward Donnelly, who was rector of the Marshfield parish and adjacent missions of the Roman Catholic Church, has been hidden farewell to his church people in this locality and has left for Portland, where he will reside and in which city he will attend to special church work to which he has been assigned by Archbishop Christie. He will make occasional visits to Marshfield, but Portland will hereafter be his home and he will reside at the Archbishop's residence in that city.
Father Donnelly has been on Coos Bay for nine years. He was rector of St. Monica's church in this city and also of a congregation in North Bend, as well as having in charge the surrounding missions. The territory covered all the coast country from the northern boundary of California on the south to the Stuslaw River on the north, in which there were four churches, and services held at regular intervals in about 20 private homes. For six years Father Donnelly looked after the entire territory, going over a country which required stage, boat and horseback travel and sometimes travel on foot. Three years ago Rev. Father D. C. Curley was appointed assistant and relieved Father Donnelly of much of the work.
About seven years ago Father Donnelly was urged to build a hospital. He undertook the work without much encouragement at first, but the hospital once started was brought to completion with the help of the priest's friends at home and abroad. The hospital building was erected at North Bend at a cost of about $24,000, and the property is now worth easily $60,000. Father Donnelly also built a new church at Gardiner on the Umpqua River, which is now well attended. Father Donnelly has always taken a deep interest and active part in the progress of affairs on Coos Bay and has been one of the conspicuous personages in all public-spirited matters. His friends were quite as numerous outside of his church as within it. A farewell reception was given him at the home of A. H. Powers and was attended by representatives of all classes.

Rev. Father Moran will succeed Father Donnelly in charge of the local parish and Father Curley will also remain here. According to a new arrangement, instead of having a priest in charge and an assistant, the territory

Was Mother of Five Daughters and One Son—Member of Methodist Church for 22 Years.

GARDINER, Or., May 8.—(Special.)—Rebecca Wade Butler, who died here March 25, 1909, was an Oregon pioneer of 1855. She was born in Lexington County, Kentucky, May 2, 1841, and came to Oregon with her father's family, landing in Gardiner, April 29, 1855. In June, 1856, she was married to John Nicholson. To this union were born five daughters, Mary Bell, Mrs. Alice Reed, Mrs. Annie E. Reed, Mrs. Katie M. Pyle and Mrs. Mary Smiley. In 1890, she was married the second time to Joseph H. Butler. WRECK OF SHORES SEEN

TWO MEN POSITIVE THEY RECOGNIZED VESSEL.

Captain and Mate of Scamper Watched Debris Which They Were Sure They Could Identify.

The Late Mrs. Rebecca Ward Butler.

DULUTH, Minn., May 8.—The story of the wreck of the Adella Shores was brought to Duluth by Captain Geel and Mate Spaulding of the steamer Simon Langwell, which arrived in port last night. The Langwell Tuesday morning met with wreckage and the upper works of a boat that the captain feels sure was the Shores. The mate's story follows:
"Several lock planks floated by. There was nothing to indicate to what vessel they belonged. Suddenly Captain Geel pointed out to starboard. I looked and saw the upper works of a vessel about 1000 feet from us. There was no sign of a name.
"That is the Adella Shores," said the captain. "I know her well." I knew the Shores also, and agreed with him. We were then about 12 miles north-northeast of Grand Island."
Captain Geel states that he is positive the wreckage came from the Shores.
