BIRDS TO BE SAVED

President Creates Reserves Where Hunters May Not Go.

WILL PROTECT WILD FOWL

Reservoir Sites of Reclamation Bureau Selected for Reservations on Which No Gunning Will Be Permitted.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Wash., May 22.—Official announcement has just been made of the fact that President Roosevelt, in the closing days of his administration, signed proclamations creating 25 new reservations for the protection of native birds. Seventeen of these reservations embrace reservoirs created by the U. S. Reclamation Service for the storage of water for irrigation purposes, and these reservations cover not only the entire water surface, but a narrow strip of the surrounding shore, on which no gunning is permitted. The reservations of the latter type are located on the following lakes or projects: Salt River, Ark.; East Park, Cal.; Deer Flat and Minidoka, Idaho; Willow Creek, Mont.; Carlsbad and Rio Grande, N. Mex.; Cold Springs, Or.; Belle Fourche, S. D.; Strawberry Valley, Utah; Lake Keechelus, Kachess and Cle-Elum, Bumping Lake and Concouly, Wash., and Shoshone, Wyo.

These seventeen reservations are so located as to interfere in no way with the reclamation projects, and the land surrounding the various lakes and reservoirs is of such as is needed by the Government. Of course private lands included in the limits of any of these reservations is not affected by the President's order.

Check to Pothunting. The main object of the administration in creating these bird reservations is to put a check on pothunting and the slaughter of birds for commerce. In many of the Western states the killing of birds for their plumage has, of late years, become a thriving industry, but it has resulted in the virtual extermination of several species, and the material reduction in the numbers of others.

ing his disbelief in the Mondell theory. It was at that same time that he created most of the other reservations above enumerated. Those Government officials who are interested in this subject make the assertion that the various states are not at all exercised over the creation of these game preserves, but on the contrary, give them hearty indorsement.

Alaskan Birds Protected. In addition to the 17 bird reserves upon reservoir sites, six bird reserves were created in Alaska, as follows: Bering Sea reservation, embracing Hall and St. Matthews Islands in Bering Sea; Pribilof reservation, embracing two small islands of the Pribilof group, occupied by myriads of sea fowl, about the middle of the Aleutian Archipelago; Yukon-delta reservation, embracing the treeless tundra of the delta of the Yukon, south of the Yukon River and west of the Kuskokwim River. The lands embraced within this reservation are marshy, covered with lakes, and worthless for agriculture, mineral or other use, so far as known.

Tuxedni reservation, embracing small islets in Tuxedni Harbor, along the western shore of Cook's Inlet, on the southeast coast of Alaska. St. Lazarus reservation, embracing small islands in the mouth of Sitka Harbor. Bogoslov reservation, embracing one or two volcanic islands in Bering Sea, on the northern border of the Aleutian Archipelago. The number of islands in this reservation varies, being increased or diminished from time to time by volcanic action.

Upon these Alaskan reservations myriads of sea fowl breed annually, those on the coast or along the coast supplying summer homes also for countless numbers of wild geese, of several species and edible wild ducks.

Moose Will Be Protected. An additional and new type of reservation was created on Fire Island, near the head of Cook's Inlet. This island is a well-known resort for the cows of Alaska moose, the largest known representative of the moose family. The female moose, in the breeding season, swim out to Fire Island, and remain there with their young until the latter are big enough and strong enough to protect themselves. Then, led by their mothers, the young moose swim back to the mainland.

Each year this process is repeated, and each year Fire Island becomes the breeding ground for the Alaska moose. This island was set apart solely to protect the moose during the breeding season, in the hope of preventing the extermination of the species. This is the first game preserve created by Presidential proclamation, and designated as such. Other reservations, operated primarily or secondarily as game preserves under Federal control, but this is the first reservation created for this sole purpose. The Biological Bureau of the Department of Agriculture was largely responsible for having this reservation created.

It is stated that among the water fowl and birds which will be preserved on the various reservations of Alaska are the Emperor geese, auklets, gullinots, murre, puffin, violet-green cormorants, pigeon gullinots, glaucous-winged gulls, leaches, fork-tailed petrels, parouquet auk, Kittiwake gulls and all manner of geese and ducks that frequent Alaska. In addition to prohibiting the killing of birds on any of the reservations, the President's order prohibits the collection of eggs. Heretofore the eggs and plumage captured annually in Alaska have been worth a great many thousands of dollars.

cers of the United States Army stationed at Governor's Island believe today that they have been paying high honors to an umbrella salesman. Several days ago a tall, distinguished-looking man with a monocle and a heavy English accent presented himself at the headquarters of the Department of the East on Governor's Island and asked for the officer of the day, Lieutenant M. Janey, of the Twelfth Infantry. The stranger's card, besides his name, carried the legend that he was commander of the Seventh Dragons of the British Army stationed at Canterbury. He said he was staying at the Hotel Knickerbocker, with his secretary and chauffeur and a high-power car with him.

"Major Bertie-McGraw" was warmly received by the Army officers, and for several days was extensively entertained. Major John S. Mallory, of the Twelfth, and Captain Halstead Dury, who is General Wood's aide, gave him a semi-official dinner, and Captain E. D. Smith kept him over night at his house. Lieutenant Dewey kept him over night several times, but yesterday morning he fled again and called up the hotel to request that the Major's auto and chauffeur be sent down to him. Instead the hotel sent its house detective and demanded payment of a $5 board bill. While the stranger induced a young woman friend to advance the money for him, a search of his one piece of bag-sage at the hotel revealed his connection with an umbrella house at Niagara Falls.

To Clean Tan Leather Shoes. A raw white potato, cut in halves and peeled, is excellent for this purpose. Rub the potato, which must be freshly cut, well into the leather, leaving no part untouched. Let this dry on, then polish with a rag with a light, quick motion. A little turpentine on a flannel rag is also a good cleanser for tan leather, while several drops of lemon or orange juice give a brilliant polish to any leather. Olive oil.
