THE HAGUE, May 12.—The decision of the court of arbitration on the Casa Blanca dispute between France and Germany over the foreible seizure by French officials of deserters from the French foreign legion, while under the protection of the German Consulate, was delivered today. While not placing the blame definitely upon either France or Germany, the court censures the representatives of each nation in several particulars.

It declares that the secretary of the German Consulate at Casa Hianca was endeavoring to bring about the embarkation on a German steamship of deserters from the French foreign legion who were not of German nationality, and adds that the Consulate had no right to protect deserters who were of German nationality, and that the Consul committed an error in signing their safe conduct. Nevertheless, the decision continues, the German Consular officials were not guilty of an intentional fault.

The court states that the French military authorities were wrong in not respecting the de facto protection exercised by the German Consulate. The circumstances did not justify the French soldiers in threatening the Consular agents with revolvers, nor in their ill treatment of the Moroccar troops attached to the German Consulate.

The pace at the sfart was killing, when Selien began to take a lead. For about four miles the Frenchman hung to his heels, but he found the pace too fast. Selien went steadily until he had a lead of half a lap in the seventh mile, when St. Yves went to the clubbonse. Then Selien showed more speed and gained a lap on Marsh. For several miles there was a game struggle, but Marsh found that he could not keep up with his opponent and he, too, dropped out after having gone ten and a haif miles. Selien had a lead of a lap at the time and finished alone in fine style.
