BLAME ON WOMAN

Seeks to Justify Brutal Crime
When Questioned by Girl's Mother.

ATTORNEY REFUSES CASE
Prosecutor Refuses to Consent to Cremation of the Body and
It Will Be Buried at Hillsboro.

Rabbi Wise May Officiate.

HILLSBORO, Or., May 22.—(Special.)—John D. Roselair, wife-murderer, today told the story in his first meeting with the woman he killed in his mountain home a week ago today because she threw a pan of milk in his face. He related the incidents to Mrs. Rosalia Dombrower, mother of the dead woman. He made every attempt to justify his terrible crime in the eyes of his listener. When he talked of his second wife, he displayed the belief that a woman is the slave of man and that she must have no opinions of her own contrary to that of the husband.

Once Gave Wife $10.
After several meetings they were married. He says that he gave her $10 prior to marriage to pay arrearages for room rent and that the girl feared trouble as her trunk was being held and she had gone to her room and broken its lock.

Keeps Up Pride in Religion.
That Roselair's brute passion is never directed toward a man but always directed against women, was evidenced by the fact that when a former Hillsboro man, W. E. Thorne, took him to task for beating the second wife and abused him roundly, the recipient of the lecture kept entirely cool and collected and made pacific replies in all instances.

Body Will Be Buried.
District Attorney E. B. Tongue has denied the request for permission to permit the body to pass for cremation, and the remains will be interred in the local cemetery. This decision has been reached after a careful reading of the authorities, and may be construed as an admission that exhumation might later follow. Mrs. Dombrower was not insistent upon cremation after she was convinced that the court officials wish to do all in their power to prevent a miscarriage of justice.

More Than Ten Years Ago (Feb. 12, 1899.)
the Following Announcement Appeared in the Sunday Oregonian:
THE KIMBALL PIANO AND THE
CHICAGO MUSICAL COLLEGE
A Change of Great Importance and Significance to the Western Artistic Fields.

The announcement that the Chicago Musical College, which has heretofore used the Steinway piano, will hereafter exclusively use the Kimball piano, is a recognition of the wonderful artistic development of the West that merits more than passing notice.
A few years ago—a very few years at that—Chicago was little known as an art center, either in the field of instruction or manufacture. Today it possesses the greatest orchestra in the country, many famous schools and conservatories, and a list of piano factories that produce nearly, if not quite, one-third of the total output of pianos in the entire country.
These facts are not mentioned here frequently because they are in these columns and do not need elaboration at this time; but they come to mind prominently in commenting upon the decision just made by the Chicago Musical College to equip its new and beautiful conservatory building with Kimball pianos—an equipment by the way, that means 50 pianos, 15 of them being grands and one a full-sized concert grand of the recital hall.
The Chicago Musical College is the largest institution of the kind in the country, and under the personal care of Dr. Ziegler, the president, has grown and developed that we have no space to describe. Accordingly, the beautiful structure on Michigan Boulevard, near Van Horn street, was secured and completely remodeled and has just been occupied. Here are the surroundings, the location and the equipment of the permanent home of the college that has become an ideal for the artistic life of the West.
The W. W. Kimball Company has no grown and developed in the manufacturing field, that today they own and operate the largest piano factories in the world. The institution has become a giant, not only in the music trade, but in the general industrial life of Chicago, and, therefore, of the entire West. It is as gigantic as in output, and in every way it is recognized as a commercial history of Chicago.
What more natural, therefore, what more appropriate, than that these two great institutions, such representative of its kind, should recognize each other in a reciprocal and that when it became necessary for the Chicago Musical College to equip its new building it should select the Kimball piano, manufactured by an institution whose success is not temporary, whose future is unquestioned, and whose future is assured.
This selection of the Kimball piano adds another to the many flattering and valuable testimonials that have so lavishly shown up upon it. It is a long list of the most illustrious artists of the world have ordered for their personal use, and been pleased to exhibit in the Kimball piano, not only in its artistic acknowledgment, but in deliberate judgment set forth in black and white.
These testimonials are naturally prized and greatly appreciated by the Kimball Company, and not one can imagine, in this latest order for 50 pianos from the greatest college of music in the country, coupled with the acknowledgment that hereafter the Kimball piano will be used in the institution in educational work, and in all recitals and concerts.
The college staff numbers about 50 instructors, and the roll shows over 2000 pupils. This means a tremendous choice for the advancement of art.
And it all goes to add another powerful argument relative to the remarkable and wonderful development of the musical life of the Great West.—Chicago Musical Times.

It is a significant fact and one particularly noteworthy, in view of the laurels so splendidly earned by the Kimball of late, that the record of the Kimball Piano at Chicago Musical College, the foremost institution for higher musical instruction in America, is such that during all these years the Kimball Pianos, uprights and grands, met every requirement made upon them by the exacting work incident to instruction and concert work at a Musical Conservatory.
So thoroughly satisfactory were the Kimball Pianos that upon the removal of the College to larger and still more commodious quarters, an additional order for 75 Kimball Pianos was placed by the faculty last week, as is shown in the following telegram, taken from the Music Trades, May 15, 1909:
COLLEGE BUYS 75 KIMBALL PIANOS
(Special by telegraph.)
Seventy-five additional fine, new Kimball pianos were installed last week in the handsome new home of the Chicago Musical College at Nos. 246-249 Michigan avenue.

FARMERS ENJOY PICNIC
UMATILLA WHEAT KINGS SPEND
DAY AT ATHENA.
Crowds Arrive by Excursion Trains and Parade Streets of Athena to Picnic Grove.
PENDLETON, Or., May 22.—(Special.)—Farmers to the number of several hundred gathered at Athena today for the first annual farmers' picnic for Umatilla County. Excursion trains were run from Walla, Walla and Pendleton, and though the day started off with chilly threatening weather, it cleared off by noon and was very enjoyable.
The arrival of the two excursion trains was timed for the same hour and as fast as the people piled from the cars they were formed into a procession headed by the band and marched to the grove. The celebration spirit was rife and the scene at the picnic grounds and about the little city was that of a Fourth of July celebration or street carnival.
Popcorn, red lemonade, peanuts and confectionery were omnipresent, and everybody seemed to be having a "great time." Following the brief morning programme, the immense throng sat down to a regular old-fashioned basket dinner, which had been provided by the farmers, and all visitors were hidden to eat without stint.
A. L. Swartz was grand marshal of the parade. J. T. Leussler, president of the County Farmers' Union, was the presiding officer, and the address of welcome was delivered by Mayor J. B. McEwen. F. A. Skies, state president of the Farmers' Union, made the response. The closing part of the afternoon's programme was a baseball game between Milton and Athena, resulting in a victory for the latter team.
