ELECTRIC AUTOMOBILE THAT WAS ADJUDGED HANDSOMEST OF CLASS IN PARADE LAST WEDNESDAY.

MISS MILDRED KEATS AND HER MOTHER IN DECORATED CAR THAT WON FIRST PRIZE. Mildred Keats, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Keats, who drove the handsomest decorated electric automobile in the parade Wednesday afternoon, had had only four lessons in driving. She piloted the car through the entire line of march without assistance. Mrs. Keats accompanied her and handled the brakes. The color scheme was pink, the dresses worn by the fair occupants matching the hundreds of blooms with which the vehicle was decorated and revealed a magnificence of design, combined with artistic arrangement and detailed structure showing extensive labor, which, with other points of merit, convinced the judges that the machine was the finest in the parade.
