No Limit to the Compliments
Bestowed by Excursionists
From the East.

SEE GREAT FUTURE HERE

Guests Unite in Declaring This a
City of Wonderful Present and Unbounded Promise—Warmth of Welcome Impresses All.

Chicago business men had a hard time to say all the nice things they wanted to about Portland in the limited time the excursion of the Association of Commerce of the lake metropolis stopped here Thursday. Before leaving late that night, however, leading members of the party seized an opportunity to express themselves in appreciation of their entertainment in Portland by the Commercial Club and the Rose Festival management, as well as discussing briefly their opinion of Portland's trade position among the Coast cities.

In these interviews the visitors were most kind. Furthermore, they insisted they meant every word they said. The speakers agreed that Portland marked the climax of the trip and that no other point visited on the way home could approach the hospitality extended here.

Harry A. Wheeler, chairman of the Chicago party, was particularly complimentary. In his report he made the toast, "The Flying Squadron," at the Commercial Club dinner Thursday night, he said:

Charmed With Welcome Here.

Personally I have known the hospitality of the Portland Commercial Club. Some of my friends who are on this delegation never having been here are as surprised as I was a year ago at the splendid reception you afford your visitors. We believe Chicago is no exception in this respect, but we love to think that you are giving to us just as cordial and just as wholehearted a reception as you do to all of the others who visit your beautiful city.

This morning you met us with both hands outstretched, and that, last year, the assurance of an honest and sincere heart in the cordiality of your welcome. You have entertained us royally and so far as our delegation is concerned, we find that our cup of contentment is full to overflowing.

As the purpose of this trip, that the business institutions of Portland may not misunderstand us, let me say that this delegation is upon a friendly mission, and to cultivate a relationship between Portland and Chicago that shall continue and grow greater in friendship through all the years to come.

The members of the delegation will bear out the statement that we have been conservative during the entire trip in speaking of the city. We have visited these fine spots in the "Most beautiful city," "Greatest in importance," "Greatest in commerce," and "Greatest in development." These things have been said in them to us a tinge of incoherence and we have tried to avoid them because they all have something that is great, that is, in visiting this city and returning to Chicago, it was my firm conviction that here at the junction of the Willamette and the Columbia rivers, with all the resources of your state practically undeveloped, and the tremendous things you men are capable of doing, and the spirit with which you do them, that here was the place where if not the greatest city on the Pacific Coast, should be reared side by side with perhaps the greatest city in the North and one to the South, a great future metropolis of the Northwest.

Portland's Wonderful Future.

I believe the city of Portland occupies a site and has a destiny that is greater than any other city on the Pacific Coast, and that does not sound altogether conservative from the Chicago standpoint, I give it to you as a personal opinion, and I believe a year ago and the reconstruction of that idea upon the basis of our visit today.

I will not limit upon your resources, your mines, your timber, your agriculture, your fisheries and your port. All of these things you have as well or better than any other city on the Pacific Coast, and there is no question but that Portland, now that your railroad development is beginning and you have become indelibly the new, the land Empire, shall increase not only in your inland commerce and trade but your Oriental trade to a point that in the old days never dreamed to be possible.

The delegation of ours on this mission asks that you come and visit Chicago. We extend most cordially an invitation to the Commercial Club of Portland to come in a body or to come singly, come as you will, and you will find as a result of this visit, and you will find that there is outstretched to you the same hearty hand, the same hearty hospitality, the same heart speaking, that has been accorded us in Portland, if you shall give us the opportunity to greet you in our city.

Impressed With City's Progress.

John M. Hart, of John M. Hart Co., wholesale hardware factory products, in speaking of the purpose of the present tour, said:

Our delegation representing the Chicago Association of Commerce, are making this tour to secure a more accurate knowledge of the development and existing conditions in the great Northwest, and to create closer and still more friendly relations between this section and our city. Our visit is not made for the advancement alone of our jobbers, our manufacturers, our retailers, or any one class of our merchants, but for the interests of such classes of trade as will to the greatest degree benefit the city of Portland and the city of Chicago as a whole.

I am greatly impressed with the evidence of progress which I find in your city. The character of your jobbing institutions in the hardware, grocery and other lines evidence the fact that a large part of the goods consumed in these lines is supplied by your own jobbing houses. In the natural order of things the jobbers in this city must inevitably be to an even greater extent the principal, if not the sole source of supply for the retail merchants in that part of the Pacific Coast states naturally tributary to Portland. The jobbers of Chicago and other central Western noticeable percentage of the trade to retain any on competitive lines of merchandise. The growth of your population, the result of the growth of your population, has been a permanent and substantial nature.

Your development has not only been to your benefit, but has been of immeasurable advantage to Chicago and the entire country. What business has been lost by our city as the result of the creation or enlargement of your jobbing interests is more than made up for us by the increased consumption in your territory of articles which are manufactured in our city and which we will supply to your jobbers.

For these reasons we are pleased to see the great development in the jobbing interests of Portland, and I believe it to be the spirit of the Chicago business men who are manufacturing in our power for the upbuilding of your jobbing interests.

This is land of Promise.

PAINLESS DENTIST

342 1/2 Washington Street, Corner Seventh
OFFICE HOURS—8 A. M. to 5 P. M. SUNDAYS—9 A. M. to 12 M.
Phone Main 2119—Fourteen Years in Portland

when asked as to his impressions of the present tour, said:

We were visited with enthusiastic admiration for the enterprise, commercial vigor and attractiveness of the city. The evidence of its resources, the Northward, through which our pilgrimage extended, but those of our party who had previously explored this country, said, "Wait until you see Portland." We have seen it and are charmed by the generous hospitality of its citizens, the beauty of its residence districts and the evidence of its commercial prosperity.

This is the land of promise. Nowhere in the United States can a young man with small capital or even without capital, find such golden opportunities.

We have met here many of your citizens who came from Chicago. Each of them is an ardent booster for Portland. None of them could be persuaded to return to their native state to the Northward, through which our pilgrimage extended, but those of our party who had previously explored this country, said, "Wait until you see Portland." We have seen it and are charmed by the generous hospitality of its citizens, the beauty of its residence districts and the evidence of its commercial prosperity.

Typical of Best in America.

Professor John A. Scott, professor of Greek of the Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., was enthusiastic in his praise of the citizenship of Portland. He said:

Portland is an ideal city, ideal because of its location on a river near the ocean, in a fertile valley, with a climate of unusual leniency and also because of its citizens which represent the selected blood from all the best cities in America, and which is destined to be the best in American life, and it is destined to become one of the very great cities of America.

Eugene L. Kimbark, of the Paper Mills Company, Chicago, said:

I visited Portland in 1905 with the first delegation of the Chicago Commercial Association. The reception accorded us at that time was most pleasant, but today you have still more overwhelmed us with your attention and your cordiality. The city of Portland has made most remarkable improvement and development in the past four years. You have fine buildings and homes in abundance. Your new residence districts are wonderfully beautiful. Your commerce is developing rapidly and I cannot see any reason why you will not continue to improve and grow with the years to come. Your citizenship is of the best and your Rose Festival is proof of that sentiment which is necessary for the best in life.

Impressed by Rose Parade.

Charles Seegars, president of the American Varnish Company, said:

Portland, the City of Roses, as you call it, was the finest I ever saw and I am only sorry that I cannot stay longer. The city is one with a great business future and it will be greater than we expect now. I have seen Europe, but prefer Portland as a residence city and I hope to return to it.

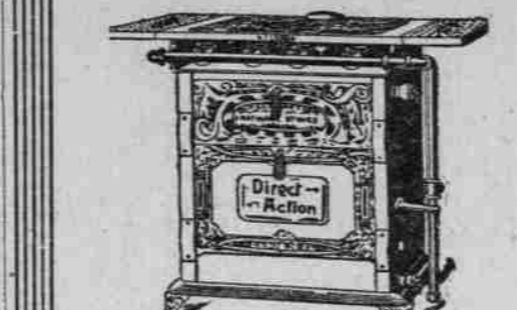

Emile M. Despres, of the firm of Despres, Bridges & Noel, said:

I have been most favorably impressed with the members of the Portland Commercial Club has not been surpassed. I believe that as a community, Portland is as firmly established in the Northwest as the rock of Gibraltar. It has a great location, with both railroad and boat transportation. Portland is destined to be a city of 600,000 within the next 10 years.

George G. Powers, of the Union Wire Mattress Company, said:

I am always particularly glad when my business brings me to Portland. There is a smile and you immediately feel that you are among friends. This wonderful city seems flowing with good fellowship and this is not to be wondered at, for where will you find such an environment, such a climate of opportunity for business advancement? Prosperity seems everywhere. The magnificent business district and the beautiful homes make this an ideal metropolis.

How to Save Gas

The answer is, get a gas stove or range that is up to date. The trouble with most gas ranges is that they do not burn all the gas that passes through the burner. The gas is partly burned and partly decomposed. The result is that one-fourth more gas is used than is necessary, and the decomposed gas that escapes into the room causes injury to the health of the housekeeper, who thinks that the fault is in the quality of the gas. You can save your health and save your money, if you will try one of our DIRECT ACTION GAS RANGES. These we sell on trial, and if they are not exactly as represented, money refunded.

THREE STAGES TO BE RUN

Heavy Travel From Forest Grove to Tillamook Expected.

FOREST GROVE, Or., June 12.—(Special.)

Big travel over the Wilson road into Tillamook is expected this summer from this city for there will be three stages in operation between this place and Tillamook City. The Wilson road is the most accessible mountain road because of the lack of heavy grades and the umbrageous trees on each side of the road. McNamer & Wirtz will run one stage, making the top of the Halfway House for dinner and making the trip in a day. Charles Adkins, of Concord, Mass., will also put on a stage line, and James Beech, of Wilson, who has operated a stage whenever traffic warranted it, will also conduct one this summer. The toll being paid only over the portion of the mountain road which is in Washington County.
