

NOTED AMERICAN MATRONS AND GIRLS

WOMEN PROMINENT IN UPPER
SOCIAL CIRCLES
ON TWO CONTINENTS

Lady Lowther, the marvelously beautiful wife of Sir Gerard Lowther, formerly a member of the British Embassy staff, Washington, D. C. Lady Lowther was Alice Atterton Blight, one of America's most famous beauties, the daughter of Alberton Blight, of Newport and New York. Lady Lowther has written much of her recent experiences in Morocco.

Mrs. Thomas B. Wanamaker, daughter-in-law of President Harrison's Postmaster-General, John Wanamaker, whose name is identified with dry goods and good deeds. She is a granddaughter of John Welch, another great merchant of Philadelphia, who with his brother carried on trade with West India. He was Minister to England in the '70s.

Miss Gwendolyn Burden, one of the greatest beauties among the American beauties. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Townsend Burden, of New York and Newport.

Mrs. Joseph Harriman and her two beautiful boys, the young nephews of E. H. Harriman. The Harriman boys are considered the handsomest children at Newport.

Miss Eleanor Elkins Widener, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Widener, of Philadelphia, and granddaughter of the multi-millionaire P. A. B. Widener, of Philadelphia. Miss Widener will inherit many millions, and is already reckoned the richest debutante among the buds of next season.

Mrs. Edwin Gould, one of the most charming women in New York society, the handsome daughter-in-law of the late Jay Gould. Mrs. Edwin Gould entertains graciously at both her town and country homes. She always dresses exquisitely. Her jewels like Mrs. George Gould's, are rare. Mrs. Gould was Sarah Shady before her marriage to the New York millionaire.

Mrs. Henry Clews, who was born Lulu Morris, of Baltimore. Married Fred Gebhard, of New York. After her divorce married the son of Henry Clews, the New York banker.

Mrs. John R. Drexel, wife of the Philadelphia banker, whose home in the Pennsylvania city, New York and Newport are during the season the scenes of frequent notable social functions, will probably be among the Americans to spend a part of the coming summer in Europe. Mrs. Drexel, who is ranked among the most beautiful of society matrons, is well known in the smart world of London and Paris, which cities she frequently visits. In London she moves chiefly in King Edward's set, and has been one of the few Americans to whom His Majesty has shown marked favor.