courts. Football is at present prohibited. Although Mount Angel is a Catholic school, non-Catholics are admitted. The courses of study pursued are preparatory, commercial, classical, normal, scientific and theological. The students are kept under close discipline and regular hours for study, recreation and relaxation are provided. The influences surrounding the institution are of the best. Special attention is given to musical instruction and a college band and orchestra are prominent features of the school life.

OREGON WOMAN IS PRESIDENT

Miss Lucilla Clay Carson Called to Mills College.

The appointment of Miss Lucilla Clay Carson, dean of women and professor of rhetoric and composition in the University of Oregon, to the presidency of Mills College, California, has added another link to the chain which holds this institution very closely to the affections of so many homes in Oregon and has welded more closely the varied educational interests of the Pacific Coast.

Opened in 1871 at Seminary Park, Mills Seminary was for years the most widely known institution in the West for the education of women. It was founded upon a "Christian" basis, and had as its object the training of young women for home life. In response to the demand for a more advanced training for girls, the board of trustees in 1885 secured from the state a charter in accordance with which degrees have been conferred for more than 20 years. For a long period, unfortunately, the demand for the advanced training of women did not meet the policy which the seminary, and the college was overshadowed by the large and vigorous preparatory department. It was not until May, 1908, that the board of trustees, acting on the suggestion of Mrs. Susan Lincoln Mills, president and surviving founder of the institution, decided to abolish gradually the college preparatory course and to develop the college as rapidly as the means at their disposal permitted. The development of its opportunities, however, has enlarged, not materially altered, the working principle of the school, entirely untrammelled as it is by such local necessities as must, by their very nature, affect the policy and declared, namely, that of developing into a college in which the needs of the modern Western woman shall be the first consideration.

HILL ACADEMY WELL KNOWN

School for Boys Has Pioneer Educator at Head.

The Hill Military Academy is situated on Marshall street, in the midst of one of the best residence sections of Portland. It was founded in 1893 by the present principal, Joseph Wood Hill, A. B., M. D., who for 23 years previous to that time had been in charge of the Hill School for Boys, and his "boys" may be found in almost every section of the Northwest and in many other parts of the country, occupying responsible positions or engaged in preparatory studies. The more recent graduates are doing successful work at more than one leading university.

The academy buildings are practically all modern and are carefully planned and constructed throughout. Their internal arrangement is thoroughly modern and sanitary, adequate provision has been made for light and ventilation, and every room is heated by hot water.

The armory, two stories high, contains a drill hall of 100 feet and is the workshop of the manual training department. The academy may be reached in 12 minutes by electric cars from the business center. It has the benefit of our exceptionally pure Bull Run water, municipal lighting and the use of the long distance local telephone service, yet is sufficiently removed from the city to be free from influences that would distract from study. The academy comprises all primary, preparatory and academic courses, and offers five educational courses: classical, Latin, scientific, English and commercial.

SCHOOL IS WELL SUPPORTED

Portland Academy Has 443 Students and Large Endowment.

With a total enrollment of 443 during the past year, Portland Academy, a Presbyterian institution, is one of the most thriving institutions of the Northwest. The academy is divided into two departments, the academy proper and the preparatory school. There were 210 students in the academy, and 133 in the preparatory classes. This institution has well-equipped buildings, centrally located. It has been fortunate in securing the financial support of some of the city's wealthiest families, making it possible to offer the best of facilities. The school was organized in 1885, and was incorporated in 1892. Three years later the present beautiful main building was erected on the well-known double block, between the late H. W. Corbett and the W. M. Ladd estates. Since then two additional buildings, besides the well-equipped gymnasium, have been added. Merit in scholarship in the Academy is rewarded by numerous valuable prizes, which are given to the best of all students. The courses given are thorough, and graduates of the institution, 217 of whom have entered higher institutions, have made uniformly good records. Many of the graduates go to Eastern colleges, but a large proportion also enter the Pacific Coast institutions.

THREE COURSES ARE OFFERED

Christian Brothers' Business College Has Enlarged Curriculum.

The Christian Brothers Business College, situated at Grand avenue and Clackamas street, Portland, is an institution comprising three distinct departments. It affords training in the elementary and grammar branches to young boys. It embraces a high school course for grammar school graduates and aspirants to university or college training, and it offers a well-rounded and practical course for young men who contemplate entering upon a business career. The course in the commercial branches should prove of special interest to the large and rapidly increasing number of boys and young men who are desirous of acquiring, in the shortest possible time, sufficient instruction in business life. The business course includes the following branches: Book-keeping, shorthand, typewriting, arithmetic, rapid calculation, penmanship, business forms, business practice, commercial correspondence and English composition. The high school department is of recent origin. As the scope of the college was originally planned, no provision was made for a high school course. The establishment of such a course, however, has been forced upon the board of trustees by a delegation of Portland citizens, who requested that the Christian Brothers should furnish educational facilities for students who, while not requiring a strictly business training, feel the need of efficient training preparatory to their entering upon a university career.

HOLMES HAS LONG RECORD

Business College Has Completed 20 Successful Years.

With a history of 20 successful years behind it, the Holmes Business College, located at Tenth and Washington streets, Portland, is doing a useful work in training young men and women for active careers in various lines of commercial activity. The head of the institution is Mrs. G. Holmes-Lawrence, and all members of the faculty are recognized as experts and highly capable in their several departments. The general courses given at the institution are as follows: Commercial course, civil service course, shorthand course, combined course, private secretary course and academic course. Each of these courses is thorough and the management gives assurance that when the student has completed any one of them he shall be in line for lucrative employment. In fact, the college itself makes it an object to put its graduates in good situations. Care is also taken by the management to find good boarding-houses for its out-of-town students. Pupils are received at any time, but the faculty advises those who find it convenient to register in the Fall to do so. The first week in September is devoted to receiving students and the first week of June each year is set aside as time for graduation exercises.

NEW HOME WILL BE ERECTED

Dental College Is Soon to Have Fine Building.

The North Pacific College of Dentistry, located in Portland, is one of the largest institutions of its kind in the entire West. It was organized in 1893, and its progress has been rapid, both in increased attendance and in the standard of the course offered. In order to accommodate this growing enrollment, the school will soon begin the erection of a new building on East Sixth street, between Pacific and Oregon. This building will be of concrete, four stories in height, with classical portico, Corinthian columns and ivory white exterior. The present main college building, located at Fifteenth and Couch streets, is a four-story brick structure, and entirely ample to meet immediate needs. The equipment of the college is all modern and many of the appliances and fixtures were designed and constructed especially for the school, making an equipment unsurpassed for teaching dentistry in all the branches. The college has a large alumni who are successful practicing dentists in Oregon and other states. The teaching staff is composed of well-trained specialists who are progressive and keep abreast of the latest ideas in dental science.

NEW ROAD HELPS PACIFIC

Electric Line Expected to Result in Increased Attendance.

Pacific University, at Forest Grove, has one of the most beautiful sites in the entire West. A 12-acre campus, dotted with giant oak trees, makes a splendid setting for the attractive buildings and also affords plenty of room for athletic fields. Pacific is the most largely endowed institution in Oregon outside of the state schools. It was formerly a Congregational college, and is still under the influence of that denomination, although the denominational clause in its charter has been rescinded. The environment of this school is one of the most beautiful cities in the state. Pacific expects increased attendance as a result of the completion of an electric line between Forest Grove and Portland. There are now nine trains each way on the electric line and five daily on the Southern Pacific. Besides this, a second electric line is now under construction. As a result of these facilities, the management of the school is now making a special effort to attract students from Portland, although the enrollment campaign extends throughout the entire state.

"QUALITY" IS ITS WATCHWORD

Portland Business College Is Doing Thorough Work.

The Portland Business College, which is one of the well-established institutions of the Pacific Northwest, has taken as its motto "The School of Quality," and is directing all its energies to living up to that watchword. At the head of the college is A. P. Armstrong, who has surrounded himself with instructors fully competent to train young men and young women for business life. The college occupies two floors, 65x100 feet, at Tenth and Morrison streets, and has an equipment valued at $20,000. It is open throughout the entire year, and new students are received at any time, special attention being given to individual instruction. According to Principal Armstrong, more calls for trained young men and women are constantly being received from business firms than the institution is able to fill. The school has been founded for many years, and is perhaps best known by the large body of capable alumni occupying positions in Portland and elsewhere to the credit of themselves and the college where they received their training.

PUPILS TRAINED FOR COLLEGE

Allen Preparatory School Makes This Its Main Object.

The Allen Preparatory School, at East Tenth and East Salmon streets, Portland, makes a specialty of training students for the American college or technical school. In accordance with this purpose, the requirements of the College Entrance Board have been made the basis of the course of study adopted. This school will be open for its eighth year September 1st. It was originally opened with an enrollment of 12 students and its growth has been very rapid.

CAMPUS IS MADE ATTRACTIVE

Improvements Benefit Normal School at Bellingham.

The State Normal School at Bellingham, Wash., will be better equipped the coming year than ever before, and offers many exceptional advantages to students, both in course of study and in environment. During the present Summer the campus has been beautified, extensive cement walks and driveways opportunities for employment than can be filled. The graduation tests in the various departments are being administered by a delegation of the student body, and the school is well qualified to fill. The school is open throughout the entire year.

GIRLS' SCHOOL WELL LOCATED

St. Helens Hall Has Favored Site in Portland.

St. Helens Hall for young women, located in Portland, is one of Oregon's pioneer schools. It was established in 1889 by Right Rev. B. Wistar Morris and from that time to the present has been under the direction of the Episcopal Church. The interior administration of the institution has been intrusted to the Sisters of St. John Baptist. The aim of St. Helens Hall is to provide for girls the best possible facilities for complete education. No school could have a more beautiful location. The building, a handsome brick structure, is on a height overlooking the city in one of the finest residential districts. The school consists of four departments—kindergarten, elementary, academic and collegiate. There is also a kindergarten training class and special departments of music, art and elocution. The collegiate department offers two years' advanced work in languages, mathematics, history and literature, equivalent to the work of the first two years in college. At the conclusion of a two years' course a certificate is given.

TWO-YEAR COURSE OFFERED

Gillespie School Also Awards Professional Diplomas.

The Gillespie School of Expression, located in Portland, is not a school of elocution, as that word is usually understood. The motto of the school is "growth" and through a systematic two-year diploma course, embracing vocal, physical and esthetic culture, literature, with analysis and interpretative rendering, music, art and elocution, the students are trained in thought acquisition, self knowledge and self expression. By experiential study, observation and all sense perception is developed; attention is fixed and the power of concentration is strengthened. The association of ideas, and the exercise of discrimination, judgment and proportion, improves the memory and cultivates taste, judgment and the reasoning faculties. The satisfactory completion of a two-year post-graduate course entitles the student to a professional diploma.

ST. MARY'S ENDS 50TH YEAR

Catholic School for Girls Has Remarkable History.

The past year has been a memorable one for St. Mary's Academy and College, located in Portland. It was the occasion for the celebration of the school's golden jubilee, and many leading educators and churchmen participated in the exercises that were held. The review of the 50 years that the school has been in existence was a story of development from a pioneer organization, with the most meager facilities, to a large and modern institution for girls, with adequate equipment and a beautiful building. St. Mary's is a Catholic school and is essentially a boarding institution, although residents of Portland are also received as day students. The collegiate course covers a period of four years above the academic course. The completion of this entitles the student to a degree, according to the standards of the college. The academic course also covers a period of four years. Special attention is paid to instruction in music and art.

NEW BUILDING COST $65,000

Normal at Ellensburg Now Has Fine Equipment.

The Washington State Normal at Ellensburg will open its 19th school year as received as day students. The faculty of 13 members, including the training school corps of seven. The heads of the departments of mathematics, biological sciences, English, physical science and geography and supervisor of the primary department have been in the service of the school for from six to 15 years. The Legislature of 1907 appropriated $75,000 for buildings; $65,000 was spent in the erection of a building for the use of the school, and $10,000 was used for central heating plant. The training school building, which was temporarily furnished in order to be used this year, is now furnished and equipped in an up-to-date manner, and the training department will be fully organized.

SCHOOL HAS NEW BUILDING

Willamette University Is Ready for Larger Work.

Equipped with a fine new building, Eaton Hall, Willamette University, at Salem, is entering on a larger field of work. Willamette is a Methodist school and the oldest educational institution in Oregon. Its progress has been rapid and its prospects for the future are bright. The new building will give all the space needed by the school, in connection with the older buildings. Willamette has a large student body, that is constantly growing. It is fortunate in being located in one of the larger towns of the state, and special attention is given to preparing its students for entrance to Stanford University. However, its graduates are admitted to other standard colleges and universities of the country, and wherever one expects to take his collegiate course, Manzanita Hall offers numerous advantages for preparatory work.

having been laid out. A new and modern athletic field will be opened the coming Fall.

A new annex to the science hall is now nearing completion, and will provide abundant room for zoological and botanical laboratories. The museum rooms will be set aside, as well as quarters for manual training work. This institution has a capable and energetic head, Edward T. Mather, the principal.

NEW COLLEGE MAKES GAINS

Rose City Institution Prepares Students for Business.

Although one of the city's newer institutions, the Rose City Business College is fast building up a reputation for successful work in its particular line. This school is located in the Commonwealth building, on Sixth and Ankeny streets, and it has made good gains in enrollment. The Rose City Business College aims to give a thoroughly practical course. Students who receive diplomas from it are prepared to accept situations of responsibility, and the school is having no trouble in placing its graduates in good positions.

MILITARY TRAINING AT VASHON

Beautiful Burton Bay Site of Modern Institution.

Vashon College and Academy is located at Burton, Wash., on Burton Bay, one of the most attractive spots in the state, and popular as a summer resort. The school has, therefore, an ideal location, beautiful and safe surroundings, spacious, well equipped buildings and a strong faculty. Both young men and young women are received for instruction, and military training and discipline are maintained. Vashon College offers up-to-date instruction in academic studies, music, elocution and the commercial branches.

BOYS TRAINED FOR STANFORD

This Is Special Object of Manzanita Hall Courses.

Manzanita Hall, a school for boys, at Palo Alto, Cal., gives special attention to preparing its students for entrance to Stanford University. leges in the United States. The management of the school will gladly furnish the public with any information concerning the courses given and the general character of the work.

Character Is Watchword.

The Belmont School, located at Belmont, Cal., 25 miles south of San Francisco, has the reputation of being an ideal school for boys. The institution is far removed from the temptations of a city life, and it is the object of the faculty to throw around the students the influences that not only are educational but stand for the development of character. The headmaster is W. T. Reid, A. M., a Harvard graduate. The site of this school is ideal for such an institution. The buildings are very attractive, and the grounds are large, giving ample opportunity for beautiful outdoor life. A climate that permits of open air activities throughout the year.
