NOVEL STUNTS IN CAMP

President Gorman, of Portland, Is Initiated in "Association of Owls" and Forced Through Ring on Donkey's Back.

BELLINGHAM, Wash, Aug. 14.—
(Special.)—The Olympic Range, which the Mazamas have never before essayed, probably will be the next objective point of the successful mountain-elimbing organization. President M. W. Gorman, a club member, held a conference with C. W. Hilmes, of Port Angeles, who has been touring the country about that range, and most favorable reports of the wonders of the region were given by Mr. Humes.

There has been some discussion regarding a proposition to elimb the giacial mountain near Lake Chelan. The majority, apparently, is in favor of one of the Olympic peaks. New officers will be elected in October, and the final decision as to which mountain will be elimbed will not be given until next January. BELLINGHAM, Wash., Aug. 14 .-

Break Camp on Monday.

Break Camp on Monday.

Some of the Maxamas will leave the permanent camp tomorrow, but camp will not be broken until Monday. The unbroken round of pleasure which the party has been enjoying was given added zest yeaterday by a novel field meet at Camp Maxama, recently fixed about a mile and a baif from Camp Gorman. Athletic sports of all kinds were indulged in, the woman members participating. A stone monument also was erected, each one of the Maxamas placing a huge rock in the pile.

In making the official ascent Wednesday, William Q. Hardesty, of Portland, placed stakes with bits of red flannes attached at various points along the route, so that until they are covered with snow the route of the party to the summit can be easily traced. Mr. Hardesty also carried an aperoid barometer, which gave the elevation at the summit as 11,400 feet. Hardesty, however, says the aneroid's temperature variations render it unreliable, the government surveys having fixed the height of the mountain at 10,728 feet.

Those who reached the summit with

- Fun Around Campfire.

The evenings spend around the campfires are pronounced by many of the parky to be one of the most enjoyable features. Sengs, stories and impromptu entertainments are given. Thursday night, following the successful climb of Wednesday, included a special celebration. Judge A. J. Craven, of this city: President M. W. Gorman, of Portland, and one of the burros used in packing impediments to the camp were initiated into the "Association of Owlas". The staid climbers were pulled into the ring on the denkey's back and put through a series of evolutions that seriously interfered with their slumbers the remainder of the night. will be an average one throughout this part of the Willamette Valley.

Weather conditions the past Winter were considered very unfavorable for primes, as well as other fruits, and even a few weeks ago grave fears were entertained for the prime crop. But practically all of the orchards in this part of the state will have a full yield. This means that at least 125 cars of primes will be shipped this year from Albany, which is the greatest prime exporting center of the state.

The fruit this year is of a good quality, too. This is largely due to the fact that more care was taken of prime orchards this year than ever before, the amount of spraying and cultivation breaking all records. There was an increased acreage of bearing primes in Linn and Benton counties this year and this will make a slight increase in the crop.

Present market conditions are also favorable for primes and from all viewpoints primegrowers in this part of the state are satisfied.

INDIAN MASSACRE

Woman Who Escaped From Redskins Dies at Dayton.

DAYTON, Wash. Aug. 14.—(Special.)—Mrs. Emma Southwell, Oregon ploneer of 1831, and survivor of one of the bloodiest indian massacres in the history of the West, died here yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hermann Bade, aged 64 years.

Of the many thrilling reminiscences of this pioneer woman, the massacre near Lewiston, Idaho, in 1821, while she was crossing the plains, stands out as the most terrible. Ambushed by a large band of Snake River Indians, over 20 of Mrs. Southwell's relatives were slain before her eyes. Hiding in the long bunch grass, she saw her aged grandmother mortally wounded as she was attempting to elimb from a wagon. The empting to climb from a wagor Indians stampeded the stock and drove it away. Survivors of the massacre pro-ceeded to Corvallis and here the South-well family lived for a number of years. Passenger Trains Crowded Daily, Conductors Having Difficulty in Making Their Way Through the Many Coaches.

PENDLETON, Or., Aug. 14.—(Special.) With motive power insufficient to handle the present enormous freight and of them will pick huckleberries. handle the present enormous trop massenger traffic, and with the wheat passenger traffic, and with the wheat shipping season just opening up, the O R. & N. Co. is facing one of the most resolvent in its history. No R. & N. Co. is facing one of the most difficult problems in its history. Not only is every available locomotive being kept in continuous service but every passenger coach is also being called into service and there are a half dozen calls for every empty coach that can be found. Fourteen westhound trains passed through Pendleton Thursday and there would have been more but for the lack of motive power. The local yards are of motive power. The local yards are filled with loaded cars waiting to be shipped out. Some of them have been here nearly a week and most of them are shipped out. Some of them have been here nearly a week and most of them are scheduled to go East. Every freight train carries every car that the big locomotive can draw and many of them require two engines. Every passenger train is literally "loaded to the guards," with seats for all out of the question and good standing room at a premium. The conductors say they are compelled to fairly fight their way through their trains.

Temporary relief will be afforded in a few days by the arrival of five additional locomotives from the Southern Pacific shops at Sparks, Nev., while two are on their way here from the Oregon Short Line. This will make it possible to relieve the present congestion here, at Huntington. Umatilla and other points along the line, but whether it will make possible the successful handling of the grain crop and prevent a car shortage, is another question.

Then on top of the grain shipment question and the present heavy passenger traffic, said to be the heaviest in the bistory of the road, the Fall colomist rates so into effect next month, and it is said that two additional trains each way daily, at present, the third one having been put on but a few days ago.
