WHAL CALL BUSINESS MEN TOGETHER.—
C. A. Bigslow, president of the East Bids Business Mon's Club, said yesterday that arrangements will be made to hold a conference of business mon of Central East Portland next Thursday night at the club quarters in Ringler's hall. Grand avenue and East Mortison street, to consider the proposed East Third-street franchise asked for by the O. R. & N. Mr. Bigelow expressed surprise that the street committee should have taken any action looking to granting this franchise until the business interests of Central East Portland had been ing this franchise until the business in terests of Central East Portland had been heard from. 'It is not a matter in which the proporty owners on East Third street are alone concerned," said Mr. Bigelow, "but in fact the whole city is interested. We shall go shead any law the matter than the business." way and ascertain just how the business interests of the district feel about granting this franchise.

CHLEBRATE POET'S ANNIVERSARY The Consolidation of German-Speaking Soday of Johann Christoph Friedrick von Schiller, the great German poet, who was born in Warbach, Wurtemberg, Novem-ber 10, 1769, by a great gathering of German and German-speaking citizens in some large hall. Some good speakers have already been secured, and it is intended to give tableaux of the most cele-brated scenes from Schiller's plays. The specieties are contributing liberally toward this celebration, which to be one of the most important and interesting in the inistory of the consolidation.

WAGONS CRASH IN RUNAWAY .- A double team attached to a Union Laundry wagon ran away yesterday at 12:20 octock from North Portland, and collided at Park and Washington streets with a United States mail wagon. The horses of the laundry wagon were hurled to the ground and badly bruised. The wagon turned over and the mail wagon was also damaged. The driver of the laundry wagon was thrown from his sent, but was not seriously hurt.

It Pays to make substantial improve-ments. This has been demonstrated be-yond a question in Ladd's Addition. The enal growth of recent months and the business now doing in Ladd's Addi-tion is positive proof. There is absolutely nothing better for the money on the market, situated only 12 blocks from the new Madison-street bridge. Agents: F. W. THE POETRY OF THE APPLE Esthetic Side of the Fruit Put Into a Prose Poem and Rhyme.

At the annual meeting of the American Pomological Society, Dean L. H. Bailey of Cornell University, spoke on "The Satisfaction of Fruitraising," dwelling more particularly on the esthetic side of of the subject. He said: "In physical perfectness of form and solidity and color there is nothing in all the world that exceeds a well-grown apple. Let it be in ceeds a well-grown apple. Let it be in the paim of your hand; put in against your check and inhale its fragrance; note the stem, how it stands firmly in its cavity. This apple is not only the pro-duct of your labor, but it holds the essence of the year and it is in itself a thing of exquisite beauty. There is no other rondure and no fragrance like this." Professor Bulley closed by reading the following original poem:

My last Winter apples I ate today, Shapely and stout in their modeled skins; Securely packed in my cellar bins, Two dozen good kinds of apple spheres lay.

And today I went to my erchard trees
And picked me the first ripe yellow fruits
That hung far out on the swinging shocts in Summer sums and the Summer-day breeze

And thereby it was that the two years met, Deep in the midst of the ripe July, When the wheat was shocked and the arreams were dry, And weather of Winter stayed with me yet.

For I planted these oschard trees myself, On hillede slopes that belong to me. Where visions are wide and winds are free, That all the round year might come to my shelf.

And there on my shelves the white Winter through.

Pippin and Pearmain, Rambo and Spy, Greening and Swaar and Spitzenhergs lie, With memories tense of the sun and the dew.

They bring the great fields and the fence-rows here.
The ground bird's nest and the cowbell's stroke.
The taut-worm's web and the night-fire's of the smartweed all through the

They bring me the days when the ground was When the trees were pruned and tilled and eprayed. When fields were cleaned and the brush-wood piles burned,

I taste of the wilds and the blewing rain; And I taste of the frost and the akles; Condemned they lie in the apple guise And then escape and rescore me again.

Lumber Dealers Report Market Is Very Active.

Mills in Association Will Select Finest Oregon Fir to Be Used in Finishing Building in Washington, D. C.

Demand for Oregon and Washington lumber has greatly improved during the last month, and manufacturers are ooking forward to an unusually busy eason next year. The gratifying inrease in business, which has been quite dull during the last two years, was a topic of general discussion at the regu-lar monthly meeting of the Oregon and Washington Lumber Manufacturers' Association, held in the Commercial Club Hall, yesterday afternoon, and nearly every member present testified to his own knowledge of the growing

Since the panic of 1907, the lumber business has been depressed, and not until recently has there been much of an encouraging improvement in the conditions. The improvement in the de-mand for lumber is taken as a proof of growing prosperity in all sections of the country.

The selection of the rarest quality of Oregon fir for the interior finish of the reception room of the International Bu-reau of American Republics, to be built in Washington, D. C. formed a live topic at the meeting yesterday. The association has requested every manu-facturer to ship to Portland at least from the 20,000 feet thus to be sent, the final selection for the 4000 feet to be nsed in the building to be constructed at Washington, D. C., is to be made. John Barrett, director of the Bureau of International Republics, was formerly a Portland newspaper man, and his loyalty to the State of Oregon caused him to finish the recention room of the new to finish the reception room of the new

One of the more important features of the meeting yesterday was the agreement to standardize odd lengths of higher-class lumber as a matter of economy. It has been found that many contractors desire odd lengths, and instead of selling lumber in the future in LEGE, Corvallis, Or., Oct. 16.—(Spe-

A. L. Porter, secretary of the Western Retail Lumber Dealers' Association, which is to hold a convention in Portland in February, was a guest at the meeting yesterday, and asked for suggestions for subjects to be discussed at the coming convention, as well as at the coming convention, as well as for names of speakers. The Oregon and Washington Lumber Manufacturers' Association appointed a committee to prepare entertainment for the delegates to the convention.

Solomon Beary Knocked to Street and Badly Injured.

Solomon Beary, aged 88 years, father of Sam L. Beary, a well known con-fectioner, is confined to his home at Eighteenth and Washington streets as a result of a streetcar accident. The aged man was struck by a streetcar while out walking at Sixteenth and Davis streets. He was knocked down, his head striking the street with great violence.

Mr. Beary sustained a large scalp wound in the back of his head and was badly dazed. An ambulance was summoned and he was removed to St. Vincent's Hospital, where his injuries were dreased by Dr. A. Tilzer. He was then sent to his home. His injuries are not regarded as serious. Owing to his advanced age, his sight and hearing are both impaired and it is believed. are both impaired and it is believed that he became a victim of the acci-dent through these infirmities.
