

MAN STAY HERE ALL WINTER

How Portland Ballplayers Expect to Spend the Off Season.

SOME HAVE SAVED MONEY

McCredie Will Stick to Billiard Parlors—Others to Drift Homeward. A Few Are Headed for the Big Brush in 1910.

When the latter days of a baseball season roll around each year the fans are naturally more or less interested in what the diamond favorites of the summer will do during the winter months. Of the Portland players, many of them will remain in Portland for the greater part of the off season, while the balance will return to their Eastern or Southern homes to fan about the buzz shops.

Among the Portland players are many who are thrifty and have laid aside a comfortable sum to tide them over the period when the semi-monthly pay check is not forthcoming. Some of these are inclined to drift homeward, but a few are headed for the big brush in 1910.

Manager McCredie will naturally devote most of his time to his billiard parlors, as well as entering into correspondence with new players and his Eastern friends who have the faculty of tipping him off to a live player occasionally. At the end of the season Walter McCredie will not return directly to Portland from Los Angeles, where the Portland team finished, but will go to Chicago for a few days, and thence to his old home in Iowa.

After a few days at the latter place McCredie will journey to Memphis for the purpose of attending the meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, which convenes at the Tennessee metropolis next month. Walter will probably be joined at Chicago by his uncle, Judge W. W. McCredie, who by that time will probably be on his way to Washington, D. C., to enter Congress as the Representative of the Second Congressional district of the state of Washington.

Casey Will Stay Here. Pearl Casey, manager of the Northwestern League team, who is now enrolled on the Pacific Coast League team, will spend most of the winter in Portland. Casey has become a great local favorite and his presence here during the winter assists the fans in "buzzing" considerably. Casey, however, is planning a trip to California for a few weeks, when he will be accompanied by his family.

Phil Cooney expects to spend the winter in Portland, though the fascination for "little old New York," his home, may cause him to drift East for a short time. Cooney has an ambition to engage in business in Portland or some town in this vicinity, and as he has a good business head on his shoulders, a few years may see his little home out in this vicinity.

Ole Johnson, the hard-hitting third baseman, who is one of the best liked players that ever wore a Portland uniform, and who will go to the big brush next season, will not leave very soon, for Ole plans to spend at least two months in Portland before going to his Eastern home previous to reporting to the New York Americans. Johnson likes Portland and the fans here, and he will try to arrange matters so that he can come to Portland for the winter of 1909-10.

George Ort, Portland's clever first baseman, will go to his home in Detroit for the winter. Ort, however, announces that he will not spend many more winters in the East, for he has formed a warm attachment for the Pacific Coast and is planning to bring his family to Portland. Ort was recently notified of the arrival of the young son at his home, and his anxiety to get home can better be imagined than described.

Tommy Murray, whose home is at Pittsburgh, the home of the National League champions, will leave Los Angeles immediately for the "Sucky City." Murray will be a member of the 1910 Portlanders, and says he will be pleased when the winter arrives and baseball resumes for another season.

John Gladstone Grady, the erstwhile pitcher and now outfielder, will spend a few weeks in California and then come to Portland. Grady has decided to return to his home in Indiana for the holiday. Last winter Grady went to the Orient with Mike Fisher and his All-American team, and not having been home since he thinks he owes his folks a visit. Grady will again be a member of Manager McCredie's forces next spring.

Howard Guy, McCredie's clever pitcher, who is undecided whether to remain on the coast or return East, has an offer to play in the Imperial Valley League in Mexico, but has not yet accepted the proposition.

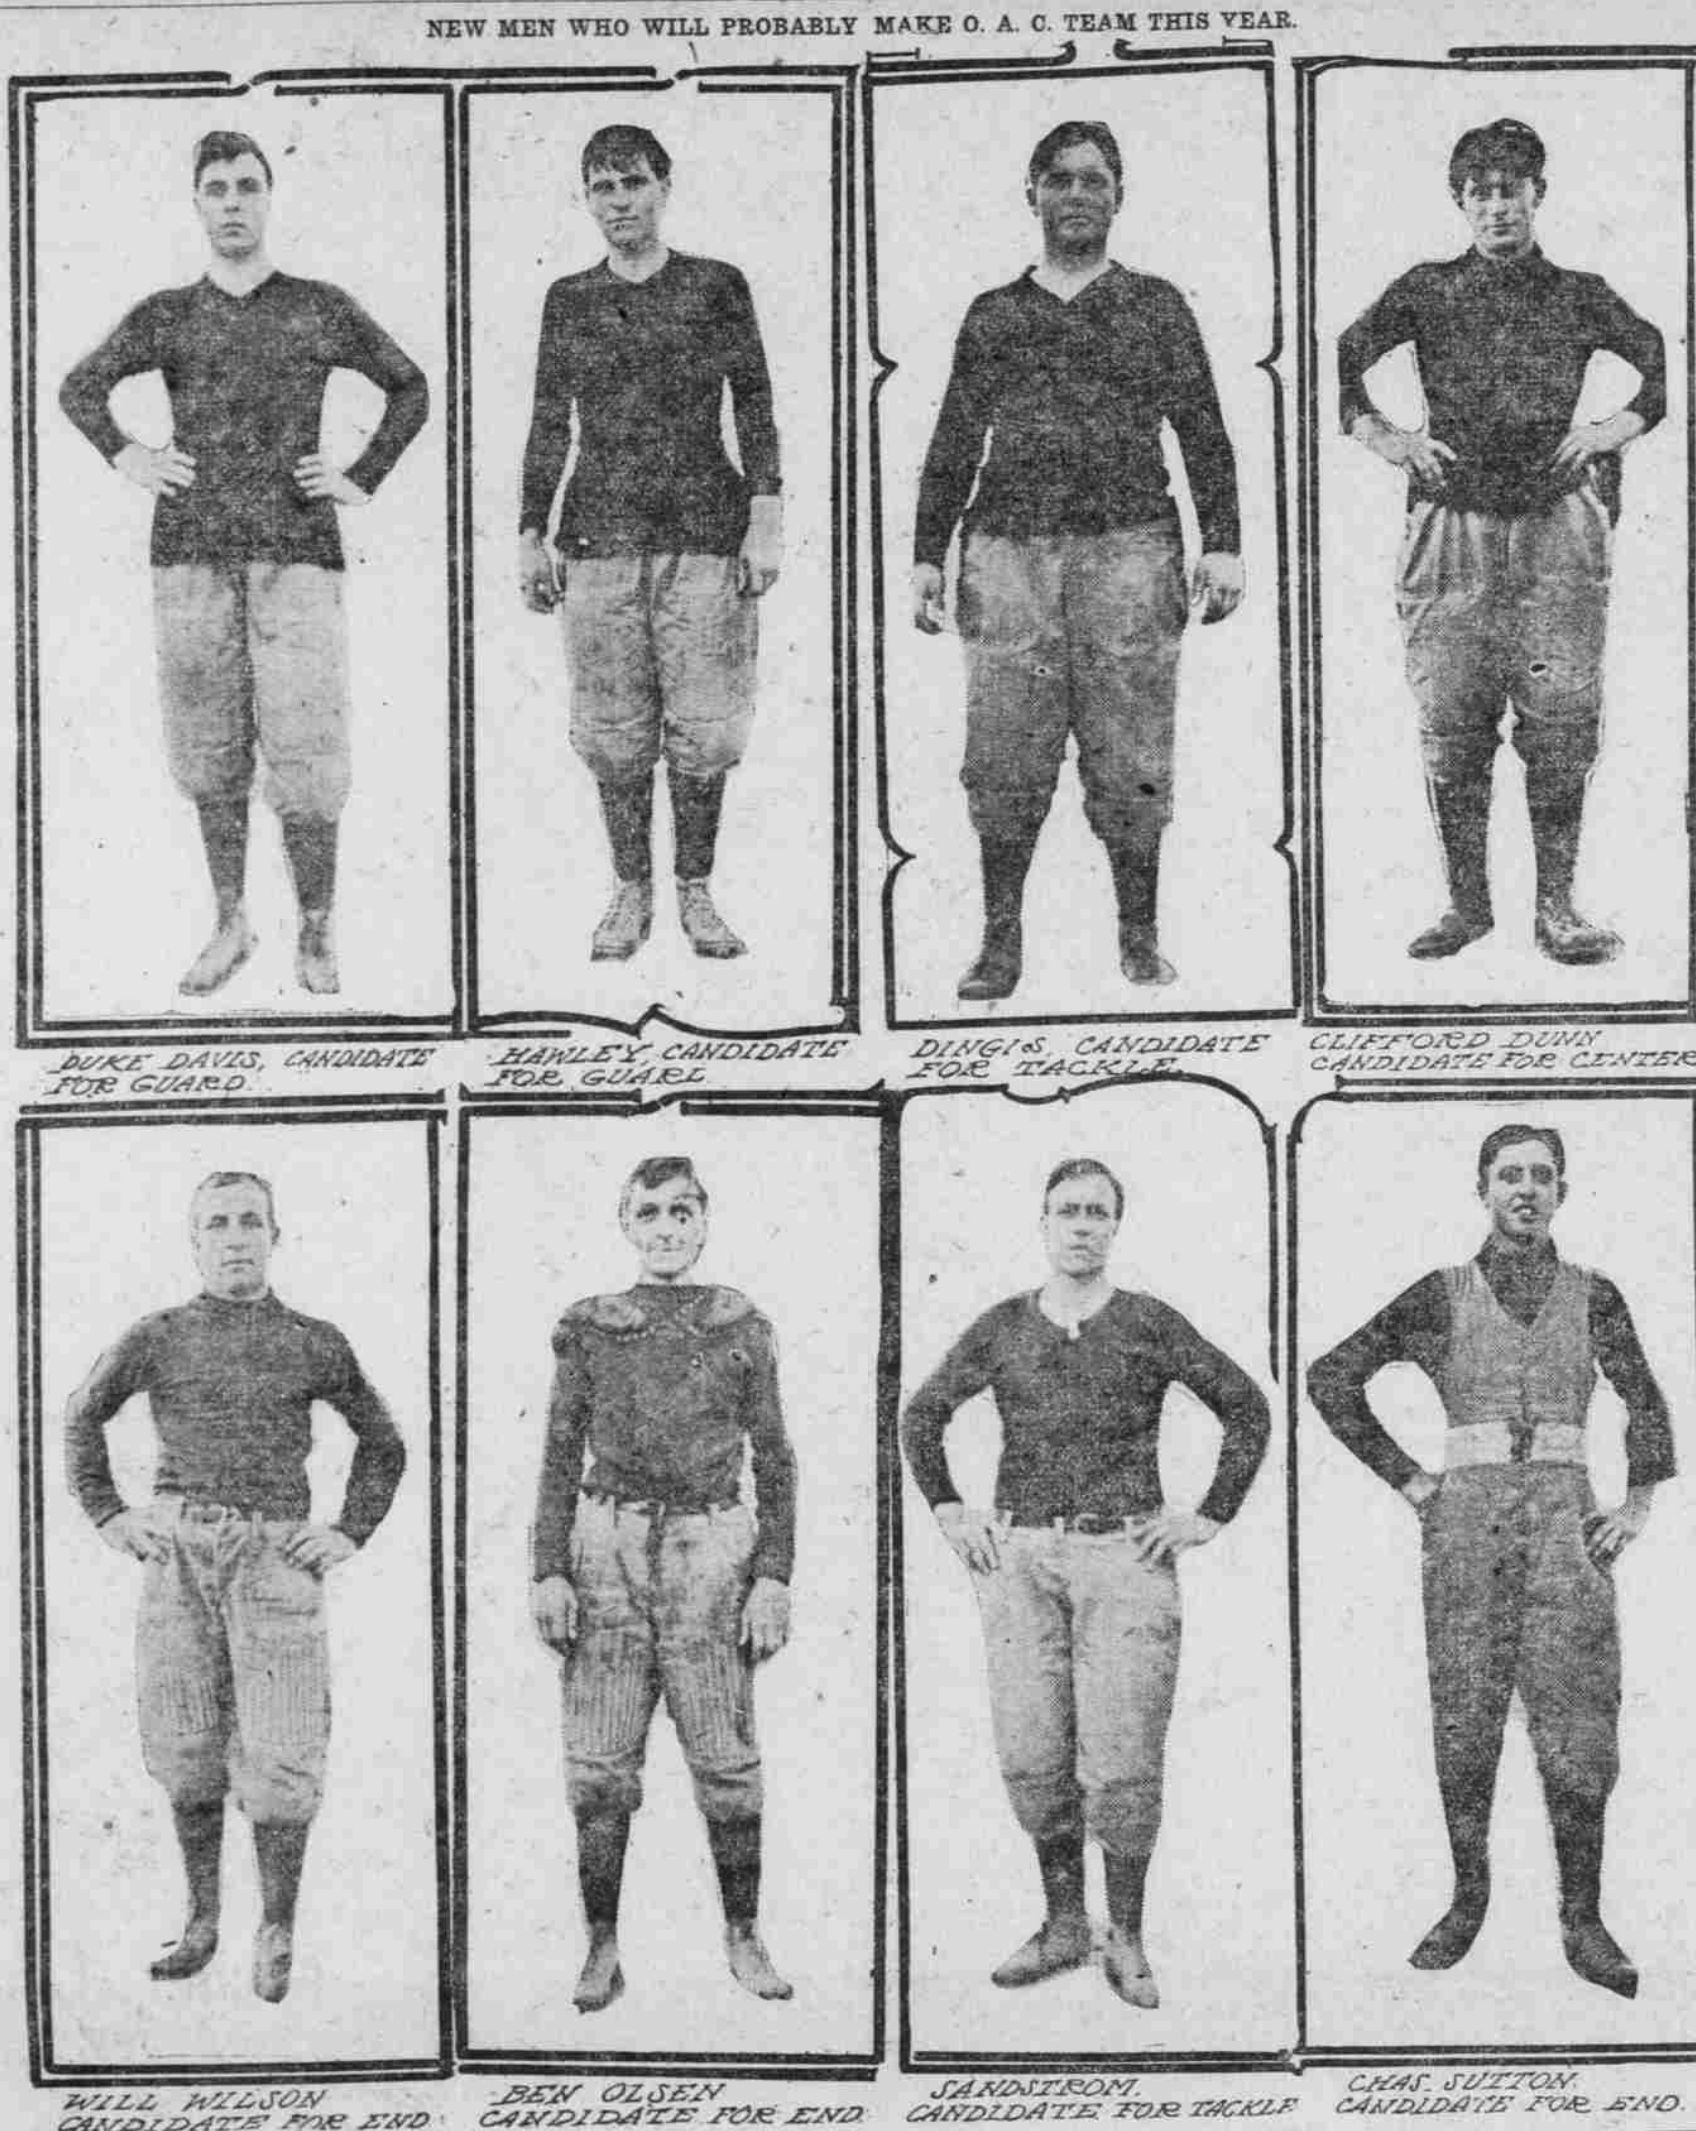

"Speck" Harkness, after a short visit to his home at Arroyo Grande, Cal., intends to join one of the teams in the winter league and thereby keep himself in shape for the winter, for he is anxious to be in good form when he joins the Cleveland American League team next winter.

Big Bill Chisnault will return to that dear old Tennessee where he will spend the winter. Chisnault is a regular winter job coaching one of the Texas universities. He has an offer to play in the Imperial Valley League, but Jesse would rather spend the vacation period near his home. He will be on deck again next spring, and the fans are delighted that he was not lost in a sale or by draft.

Al Carson, McCredie's star pitcher, will spend his off season at his home near San Diego, Cal. He may play with some of the clubs in the winter league near Los Angeles, but has not decided as yet. Frank Chance lives in Southern California and Carson may see his coming manager during the winter and talk things over for the coming season he expects to have with the Chicago Cubs.

Charley Armbruster is seriously thinking of remaining in Portland for the winter. He had planned to return to his home at Cincinnati, but the climate and the surroundings of Portland have caused him to hesitate. He says he thinks he will do better by remaining here than by going to Cincinnati, though he would like to go East as he has relatives in Boston and other places he would like to visit.

Olsen May Come Back. Ivor Olsen, Portland's clever shortstop, will return to his home near Hutchinson, Kan., for the winter. Olsen has demonstrated himself to be one of the best infielders in the league, and as he is to return next season, until McCredie disposes of him to the Cincinnati club.

SEALS YET DOUBT

Beavers Regarded as Dangerous Rivals Still.

FANS ON UNEASY STREET

San Francisco Followers of Diamond Refuse to Believe Team They Are Rooting For Has the Flag Nailed to the Mast.

BY HARRY E. SMITH. SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 16.—(Special.)—The baseball fans of San Francisco are banking on the coming series between the Seals and the Beavers to decide the story of the pennant race. Even though the Beavers had made a clean sweep this week against Vernon, while the Seals lost to Oakland, the story would not be told. But if the San Francisco fans hold up their end this week the Northerners will have to go like a house of cards in this city during the coming week to make a showing.

To be frank, the local fans are not yet saying that the Seals have the pennant. Of course, it looks very much as if the team is a certainty to fly the flag next year, but the bugs and buggies are afraid there might be a hoodoo if they claimed too much, and consequently, they are crossing their fingers and waiting and hoping for the day when the headlines can read: "San Francisco Seals Clinch the Pennant."

Fans Not Satisfied. You Portlanders cannot understand the situation. It has been so long since San Francisco has won a pennant that even now with the season all but two weeks gone, the fans cannot believe that the team is true. They have loyally supported the home club and will let out one big roar when the proper moment arrives.

There is apparently a disposition in Portland to charge the San Francisco team with having had all the best of it. The writer, who is not blinded by California because he happens to reside in the state, begs to differ with those critics. There has never been an instance in San Francisco, so far as I can recall, that the Seals have been given the best of it or where there has been anything favoring of partiality to the local club. While the local management has been anxious to win the pennant, there seems to have been no disposition to look for better than an even break.

Mohler Complains of Ewing. Kid Mohler has complained to the writer that the fact that Ewing owns an interest in the Seals and has also appointed the umpires has handicapped the local club.

"What's the use of my kicking?" complained Mohler. "Ewing always rules against me every time I make a holler, and I have come to the point where I don't say a word any more."

Against this same subject, Cal Ewing said the other day: "I will be glad to be relieved of the presidency. What I want to do is to root for my own club and when I think necessary to enter complaint against the umpires. I have been handicapped this year. I was unable to say a word because I had named the indicator men. Next season it will be different. I am going to organize a rooter's club in San Francisco and you will see a different specimen of fan than in the past. I wouldn't accept the presidency. I have no favor to ask. Some one asked me the other day if I would favor Bill Lange and I replied that I had no interest in the matter. Judge McCredie can have the job if he wants it and I will gladly vote for him if he will accept the position."

Vernon Plays Weird Ball. Vernon played the most weird baseball against Oakland last week that has been seen in San Francisco for many a day. Bools and bungles were the order of the week and all told, 37 errors were recorded against Happy Hogan's luckless Villagers.

The hitting was also a distinctive feature, no less than 73 bingles, of which several were for extra bases, being totaled up for the two clubs. The Oaks did the best with the stick, as the team average of the Commuters for the series was .235. Vernon batted .373, no poor showing for the entire aggregation.

State Leagues Winding Up. The Oakland and Stockton baseball teams of the State League are finishing up a series for the championship of the organization. Four games were played in Oakland and San Francisco of which one was protested by the Stockton club. Three were won by Oakland which certainly is a cinch to take the pennant honors.

The games did not draw any big crowds although the two games in San Francisco were fairly drawing cards. It was the Sunday morning game that was protested and it was on peculiar grounds.

The Oaklanders had the bases full with two strikes and three balls called on the batsman. The pitcher was out of his box, when he saw the runner from third had started to steal. He threw the ball to the catcher to nab the runner and Umpire George Hildebrand called a balk, arguing that the rule says a balk is to be called when a pitcher throws the ball to the bat with his feet on the ground.

He threw the ball to the catcher to nab the runner and Umpire George Hildebrand called a balk, arguing that the rule says a balk is to be called when a pitcher throws the ball to the bat with his feet on the ground.

The point is an interesting one. Cal Ewing claims the same question was raised once in the major leagues and that it was decided in favor of the pitcher, who was not to be charged with a balk, unless he was able to collect the $200 that the Sacramento outlaws owed him, he decided to do a little hustling and picked up a few baseball bats and gloves that were around loose. The other players, he it is said, had no objection to Curtis making a collection of baseball bats, but they objected very strenuously when he took gloves and other articles that were their own personal property.

Berry Wants Men to Rest. Henry Berry, down in Los Angeles, has come out with a protest against his ballplayers playing all through the winter season. He intimates very strongly that they cannot give him during the Coast League season, and that he will chop salaries another year. Berry is dead right on this proposition. I wonder that the other baseball men have not taken the same view of the situation.

It is common complaint that the Coast League season of seven months is so long that players very frequently go stale. If that is so, all the more reason why they will go stale if they insist on playing during the winter. Ballplayers are paid good salaries for seven months in the year, and they owe it to themselves to see that they are in shape when the Spring rolls around.

Eddie Griffin, the blood-haired twister of the Seals, has taken the right stand. He turned down an offer to play in the Imperial Valley League because he says that he wants to save his strength, and that instead he will go into the mountains.

There is no more serious danger to health than the presence of too much uric acid in the body. It is the duty of the kidneys to rid the system of uric acid as fast as they accumulate. When the kidneys fail to do this work thoroughly, uric acid attacks begin, first in one part, then in another. The cause of these attacks is so likely to be mistaken, even by a doctor, that it is well to post yourself on the subject. If uric acid troubles are recognized in the beginning, it is easy to cure the weakened kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills, and when the uric acid will be driven off as fast as it gathers in the urine.

It is dangerous to neglect sick kidneys. It leaves the uric acid free to attack and damage every organ of the body. The blood gets so thick with waste matter that it moves slowly, the heart beats queerly, the veins and arteries harden, uric acid crystals are deposited in muscles and joints, and are likely to form into sediment, gravel and stones in the kidneys and bladder; dropsy, swelling, appears, and the gradual tendency is towards Bright's disease.

Curtis Collects Curls. A good story came down from Sacramento the other day, but whether it is straight is something that Joe Curtis will have to vouch for. According to the article, when Curtis found that he would not be able to collect the $200 that the Sacramento outlaws owed him, he decided to do a little hustling and WORLD SERIES HAS BEEN PLAYED SINCE 1903.

Tables Give Champions of Each Yearly Contest and Pennant Winners of Both Leagues.

Never before in the history of baseball has there been greater interest in a world series than in the games between Detroit and Pittsburgh. This is probably due to the close rivalry between the two clubs and the entrance of a new contender since the annual championship has come into greater popularity. In order to give an opportunity of comparing the previous world series between the rival big leagues the following tables are the results of the interleague meetings since 1903, when Boston, of the American League, defeated Pittsburgh for the honors:
