

Ed. Stevens Returns to Medium That Won Him His First Success

Is Now Giving Studies of Dickens on the Orpheum Circuit, and Will Be Seen in Portland Soon—Still Hates Belasco.

EDWIN STEVENS, WHO WILL APPEAR SHORTLY AT THE ORPHEUM.

BUNGALOW THEATER

Twelfth and Morrison Sts. PHONES MAIN 117--A 4224

Four Nights Beginning Oct. 24

SPECIAL PRICE MATINEE WEDNESDAY

AUGUSTUS PITOU PRESENTS

CHAUNCEY

OLCOTT

IN HIS NEW PLAY

RAGGED ROBIN

By Rita Johnson Young in Collaboration With Rita Olcott

Scenes Laid at Inishannon, Time 1830

HEAR OLCOTT'S NEW SONGS

"The Eyes That Come From Ireland"—"If You'll Remember Me"—"Sweet Girl of My Dreams"—"The Laugh With a Tear in It" and "I Used to Believe in the Fairies"

SEE The Good Little People—The Fairy Host—The Banquet—The Will-o'-the-Wisp—Went of Beautiful Scenery—The Big Bog Scene.

PRICES—Evening, $1.50, $1.00, 75c, 50c. Matinee, $1.00, 75c, 50c, 25c.

SEATS NOW SELLING AT THEATER FOR ENGAGEMENT

BUNGALOW THEATER, OCT. 31, NOV. 1-2-3

JOHN E. YOUNG

The Original "JOHNNY RICKS" in "The Time, the Place and the Girl"

IN THE BIG MUSICAL COMEDY "LO" GIRLS—FUN—SONGS—SEAT SALE BEGINS NEXT FRIDAY

The event promises to be one of considerable interest.

JOHN BROWN, THE MARTYR

Sentiment in a Southern Town for the Cause He Espoused.

OAK GROVE, Or., Oct. 22.—(To the Editor.)—The following recollections of the John Brown tragedy show the sentiment in a "border" town. It was in Newport, Ky., across the river from Cincinnati, I was a girl between 14 and 15 years old. It was already murmured around that the South would separate from the North, and we children talked about war which was sure to break out at some indefinite time. Like a thunder-bolt out of the clear sky came the news one day that John Brown was to be hanged for freeing slaves in Missouri. When I think over the matter today, reviewing past events and the subsequent election of Abraham Lincoln to the Presidency, it strikes me that the great and beloved war President put into realization those grand and world revolutionizing ideas of John Brown, the great abolitionist.

Some weekly illustrated German newspaper, published in New York, brought the pictures of all the events pertaining to the execution of John Brown, which we children anxiously awaited, as nobody actually believed that John Brown would be executed. The worst happened: The feeling of John Brown's followers, the number could be counted by thousands.

Teachers Meet Patrons. JUNCTION CITY, Or., Oct. 23.—(Special.)—The R. B. Hayes Relief Corps No. 50 gave their annual teachers' reception Saturday afternoon. For the past three years the W. R. C. have given these receptions for the teachers at the beginning of the term in order that the mothers and teachers may become acquainted. The usual programme was carried out, music, speeches, toasts, etc., being the order, after which a light luncheon was served.

was about equivalent to that of the adherents of Forer, the great Spanish educator and patriot. It was simply called murder. Newport was called the "black spot" of Kentucky on account of its overwhelmingly German Republican population. A set of turners, young, sturdy fellows, who afterwards formed part of the celebrated crack Ninth Ohio Volunteer Infantry Regiment of Civil War fame, were in the foreground of the opposing movement, condemning the untimely and tragic death of John Brown, whose only "crime" was having a human heart in his breast beating for his fellow men, irrespective of color or nationality.

Mr. Bailey, an editor and newspaper publisher, who lived at the corner of Isabella and Taylor streets, issued his little weekly edition in mourning garb, leading all the good qualities in the lamented hero dying for his principles, and how he would go down in history as the originator of abolitionism. Mr. Bailey's eulogy of John Brown incensed the slavholding element of our city to such an extent that a lot of the young bloods mobbed Mr. Bailey's printing office, demolishing everything they could get hold of. The family of Mr. Bailey, as well as himself, were at the mercy of these rowdies, and through the wit of Mrs. Bailey and their two daughters, who went to the housetop and homberded the aggressors with printers' ink the lives of the family were saved. The rowdies had left the scene with a howl! MRS. LOUIS BRANDT.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

ing audiences how really "lumber" (Uriah) Heep thought himself. Studies of some of the characters in Dickens are no novelty to Mr. Stevens. He got his first start in the theatrical business by giving "Dickens evenings" before various woman's clubs in and about New York, and while he was reading, making the characters seem more real by the use of a few wigs and a little grease paint during the descriptive passages. All the women said, "My, isn't he just fine," and persuaded Stevens to try his luck at acting in a real theater. He made good at the start and has been at it ever since.

Makes Kentuckian of Missourian

Burt G. Clark Plays Colonel Sandusky Doolittle—He Absorbs the Blue Grass Spirit.

BY BURT G. CLARK.

ALTHOUGH a native of Missouri, I have been playing Colonel Sandusky Doolittle so long—it is now seventeen years since "In Old Kentucky" had its first regular performance and began touring—I feel as though I were a true son of "Old Kentucky," and as such I can realize pretty thoroughly the pulsing throb of loyalty when the word "Kentucky" is sounded in my presence. There isn't another state in the Union that commands love, and affection and loyalty as does that "dark and bloody ground" of the old frontiersmen.

Where and when do men's hearts beat and their hands applaud as to the sounds of the chorus—

Woe no more, my lady, We will sing one song for the old Kentucky home.

For the old Kentucky home far away.

Perhaps "Dixie" stirs as much, but it is doubtful. I can think of no strain of music which arouses such intense feeling, unless it be the melody which holds the Irish hearts together, the heart-throb of an oppressed people—"The Wearing of the Green."

Indeed, the intense loyalty of Kentuckians can only be compared to that of the patriot of Ireland. Wherever he is, no matter in what company, the Irishman is proud that he is Irish. So it is with the son of Kentucky. No matter where he is, he sings the praises of his state, he swells with pride at the achievements of her citizens, he lauds her women, her horses and her whisky. To the Kentuckian there is no place like his native state, and he is prouder to have been born within sound and sight of the lovely Ohio River than if he were a prince of royal blood.

The sight of a beech tree, that noble monarch of the forest indigenous to the soil of the Blue Grass country, will bring tears of joy to the weary plowder who is kept away from his native hearth; and the gentle waving of a field of the real blue grass, with its attendant odors of Spring-like freshness and fullness, will make the exiled Kentuckian almost kneel down and worship the slender spires of green. Here again the man from Kentucky is like the Irishman, to whom there is no flower so beautiful as a sprig of shamrock, no sound so dear as that of the Irish bagpipe as it drones out the air of "The Wearing of the Green."

And rarely will do these two person-

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

ages, the Irishman and the Kentuckian, hobnob and fraternize. They are brothers in their loyalty to the earth that first felt their feet, in the air they breathed and rejoiced in when young, to the land of their nativity.

BAKER THEATER advertisement for 'OLD KENTUCKY' featuring a cast list and showtimes.

LYRIC THEATER advertisement for 'HELLO BILL' featuring showtimes and cast details.

GRAND VAUDEVILLE advertisement for Ernest Pantzer & Co. featuring showtimes and cast.

Howard Missmer & Co. advertisement for 'Mister Stranger' featuring showtimes and cast.

PANTAGES THEATER advertisement for 'CONSUL, JR.' featuring showtimes and cast.

STAR THEATER advertisement for 'Hello Bill' featuring showtimes and cast.

PORTLAND THEATER advertisement for 'Eddie Foy' featuring showtimes and cast.

Orpheum advertisement for 'OUR BOYS IN BLUE' featuring showtimes and cast.

IN PORTLAND THEATERS advertisement listing various shows and venues.

Among other articles for dogs, a St. Louis concern is placing on the market a dust-eye-shield similar in every way to the same article worn by human automobile riders.

John Fred Landis, son of former Congressman C. B. Landis, has received the highest Army medal for marksmanship at West Point, where he is the youngest in the class to be graduated next June.

The development of hydro-electric energy, of which great examples are to be seen in Sao Paulo, Rio de Janeiro and Bahia, is likely to be one of the greatest lines of industrial development in Brazil.