

FRENCH FETE PARTICIPANTS EARN PRAISE FROM FIRST TO LAST FOR CLEVER WORK

Results of Month's Hard Training Show Plainly in Quality of Performances Given Before Public Past Two Days.

Participants in the French fete, the entertainment in which social interests, charity and local talent combined, Friday and Saturday at the Baker Theater, scored an unprecedented triumph. To the "Baby Minuet" especially the audience gave the heartiest of plaudits.

To Miss Henriette M. Bogardus, who in less than a month trained the participants, great credit is due. Master Wayne Coe, as the village jester, reclothed that character with dignified humor.

Ward Alden, as the itinerant violinist, played his plaintive strains for the Queen's pleasure and won her favor, as well as that of the audience. Later he accompanied the Greek singers and dancers in their interpretation of "Spring's Return."

Inventor Claims New Power Invention That Is a Marvel

H. C. Hornbach Declares His Generator Is Destined to Revolutionize World of Motive Power.

PORTLAND is the birthplace of an alleged self-generating engine, a new invention, which its inventor, H. C. Hornbach, thinks is destined to revolutionize the world of motive power. The generative power is derived from compressed air through a series of compressors which operate in unison with a series of weights attached to a drive-wheel on a drive-shaft which operates the pistons of the compressors.

H. C. Hornbach, Inventor Who Hopes to Revolutionize Motive Power Methods With His New Invention.

The inventor, who is still in his early 30s, has put 17 years of his life in solving the problem, which he now claims to have mastered. While engaged in the occupation of a locomotive engineer on a Southern railroad, Hornbach gave considerable study to the Westinghouse air-brake. Realizing the practicability of utilizing air as a generative power, he says he proceeded to work out theories on a basis of perpetual motion. During the past 15 years he has constructed two models while a resident of Colorado. Each failed to reach the criterion of his idea, yet failure in this respect only spurred his ambition for the accomplishment of his goal.

Two months ago Hornbach came to Portland from Colorado, and here, among strangers in a strange land, he began trying to transform his theories into physical evidences in a small attic room at the La Porte Hotel, on Third street. In the seclusion of the little room the inventor shaped his ideas. Although he guarded his efforts to attain his goal with the utmost secrecy, yet his mysterious and almost continual habitation of the little room gave rise to speculation on the part of others in the building. After weeks of cautious investigation, they learned the mysterious occupant of the room on the third floor had been constructing a "machine" of some nature. Soon the news became general and eventually, in its passage of the three crow stages, gossip had it that the young inventor had a "perpetual motion machine."

genius advanced the principle of his contrivance, yet took the precaution to evade a technical explanation. "I term the fruit of my efforts as an appliance which will revolutionize the world so far as generative power is concerned. It will entirely eliminate all use for fuel which is used for the purpose today. Air will be used as fuel to supplant the present day commodity. I have evolved a contrivance which, by the aid of a series of air compressors that are virtually driven by their own power and will run incessantly if required, at no further expense than is expended for oil to garnish the friction points. In constructing the invention I had perpetual motion in mind and resorted to the adoption of weights on a drive-wheel. With the aid of compressed air I have mastered the enigma of passing weights over the "deadline" which has heretofore baffled inventors. The self-generating engine, as it can rightfully be called, can be built to meet any requirements, from a one-half horsepower to 5000 if necessary, and can be relied upon for practicability as long as air exists in the universe. I may accept one of the many offers made to me by persons who have conciliated me and agreed to assist me financially in the construction of a demonstrative model. In that event I will have one on display in a Washington street show window by the middle of January."

CITY BARN SITE SELECTED
Mayor Simon and Committee Find There Will Be Room Left for Park.

After inspecting the ground yesterday afternoon Mayor Simon, Chairman Council, of the street cleaning committee of the Executive Board, Water Commissioners Ainsworth and Mackay and Superintendent Dodge agreed to a plan for building a city barn and rearranging the property so that a small park may be established, as is greatly desired by the people of the vicinity of Milwaukie and Powell streets. The party went to the scene in the Mayor's automobile, in spite of the howling wind and swirling snow, and soon decided on a course to pursue.

The new city barn, which will cost $37,000, will face Powell street and will be constructed alongside the engine-house. This will leave the small tract back of the barn and facing on Milwaukie street, for the use of a playground. Apparatus will be installed there early next Summer, as the Park Board has already ordered $5000 worth for this and other small plots, in conformity with the policy of the Mayor, who is determined to have a good many of these throughout the city, as he deems them more beneficial than large parks.

Locating the North Pole.
MILWAUKIE, Or., Dec. 3.—(To the Editor.)—I want to know if there is any way that Dr. Cook could figure out that the North Pole was on ice and no land in sight.
