Kettenbach Conspiracy Case Gets Change of Venue.

Plea That Moscow Would Entail More Expensive Hearing Is Allowed -- Other Transfers May Be Result.

valuable timber lands will be tried in Bolse commencing February 15.
Judge Frank S. Dietrich today granted the motion for a change of venue from Moscow, designating this city as the place of trial. Peyton Gordon, in charge of the prosecution, was directed to indicate to counsel for the defendants on or before January 29, which one of the cases he desires to bring to trial. In the memorandum decision, Judge Dietrich permits the defense to withdraw pleas of not guilty as moved by counsel, silows the the defense to withdraw pleas of not guilty as moved by counsel, allows the filling of pleas of abatement and demurrers and sustains the demurrers of the Government to the pleas in abatement which the defense failed to file in time. The change of yenue to Boise is granted on the ground that there will be less expense to the court if the trial bakes place bare large there is the court of the trial bakes place bare bare bare by be less expense to the court if the trial takes place here instead of Moscow, Peyton Gordon, special assistant to the Attorney-General, in charge of the Idaho conspiracy cases, said today that the actioney conservations, said today that the ruling of Judge Dietrich was perfectly satisfactory to the wishes of the prosecution. No opopsition was made to the change of venue motion as offered by the efense, the Government believing as fair defense, the Government believing as fair a trial can be secured here as in Moscow. The demurrers of the defense are overruled, that the indictments returned against the defendants cannot be attacked by their counsel, although the court is willing to concede that the indictments are defective, but prejudice to the defendants can be avoided at the trial. The court holds that the pleas of abatement were not assessed.

There is a well-found rumor that the transfer of the Kettenbach or North-ern Idaho timber fraud cases, in which the indictments were returned in 1905, 1906 and 1907, is but the stepping stone to bringing the famous Lewiston National Bank embezziement cases of Lewiston, wherein Kettenbach, Kester, Robnett and wherein Kettenbach, Kester, Robnett and others are indicted, to Boise for trial on the grounds that prejudice exists in Northern Idaho against the defendants. This would practically mean the trunsfer of all the principal criminal litigation in the Federal Court at Moscow to this

"Blind Pig" on Road From Dalles Cracks Lid of Two Counties. Railroad Contractors Op-· pose Bootleggers.

At a lonely spot near the Deschutes Canyon, on the road from The Dalles to Hill's new ferry, a cave has been hollowed out of the side of a hill. A door, covered with cement and earth, conceals this cave from the closest scrutiny. Yet if one knocks at a certain place, the door swings open and reveals a stock of liquers and a price eard. No one is in sight, and the person who enters may leave the required amount of money and carry away as much of the liquor as he wants.

This is what is known as a "gallon hill," or rural blind pig, and is one of the means used for unlawfully grasping the opportunity offered by thousands of workmen engaged in labor in a lonely canyon where there are no opportunities for recently and the copportunities for recently the second of the post of the post of the composition of the propertunities for recently the copportunities for recently canyon where there are no opportunities for recently canyon where there are no opportunities for recently canyon where there are no opportunities for preventions.

The contractors for both railroad companies are using their efforts to keep "booke" off the work, but in instances they are not wholly able to accomplish their purpose. Sherar's Bridge has become a sort of rendezvous for bootleggers. Bootleggers, in vehicles similar to those used by traveling quacks, have driven along the work. The bottles are arranged in a compartment in the rear of the vehicle and the purchaser helps himself after depositing his money in a convenient slot.

The Deschutes River divides Sherman from Wasco County. Much of the Harriman work is in Sherman County and the balance in Crook County. Both counties are "dry." Wasco County still permits the saleon, however, and on that side of the river semi-legitimate "gallon houses" have been established, where the proprietors have Government licenses, permitting them to sell liquor in quantities of not less that one gallon, which must not be drurk on the premises. It is told, however, the proprietors have Government licenses, permitting them to sell liquor in quantities of not less that a request for "near beer" produces a drink of the genuine article, and that a call for "California grape juice" will bring out something in small quantities that tastes a whole lot like brandy.

Smaller Sales Favored.

Sales in gallon quantities are not very profitable to the gallon houses, as it requires five ordinary quart whisky bottles to make a gallon, and the price is $5. A workman who will stand at a bar and buy drinks aggregating $5 or more in the course of the evening will not, as a rule, purchase $5 worth of whisky at one throw and carry it away with him. Last Fall the near-beer saloe a month, and it was a resort for scores of railroad laborers going to or returning from the construction work.

Finally, officers of Sherman County made tests of the near-beer sold and found that it differed from real beer only in the label. The places were closed, but the proprietors declared they purchased the "near-beer" in good raith and blamed the breweries, so were not prosecuted.
