

TAFT AND DOBIE IN SELF DEFENSE

Slow to Feel Attacks on Ballinger.

EAR NOT CLOSE TO PUBLIC

President Finally Realizes He Himself Is Criticized.

FRIENDS SHOW HIM LIGHT

Newspaper and Magazine Articles Dealing With Ballinger-Pinchot Row Gave Him Small Concern Until Became Concerted.

BY HARRY J. BROWN. OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Jan. 6.—Had not President Taft become convinced that many of the recent magazine and newspaper attacks upon Secretary Ballinger were in reality attacks upon himself, the force and influence of the Administration would not have been brought into line to secure the adoption of a resolution providing for a Congressional investigation of the entire Pinchot-Ballinger affair.

Once convinced that he himself was under fire, the President took the lead in demanding a Congressional investigation, and gave his unqualified indorsement to the Jones-Humphrey resolution before it was introduced.

It is a strange thing, but nevertheless true, that President Taft for a very long time was opposed to any kind of a Congressional investigation of the Pinchot-Ballinger controversy, or of either branch of the service involved in that controversy.

He felt that the country at large would abide by his judgment, inasmuch as he had reviewed both sides of the case, whereas the magazine and newspaper writers who had assailed the Secretary of the Interior and the Administration had dealt with one side only and presented a partisan view.

President Taft unquestionably was fooled about public sentiment. He has not been in close touch with the leading daily papers, nor has he followed the magazines. It is a notorious fact that he has up to this time paid very little attention to what is said in the public prints.

Being out of touch, President Taft very naturally absorbed a wrong notion of the state of the public mind. He had come to the conclusion that the attacks were solely upon Secretary Ballinger, and emanated almost exclusively from the literary organs.

But one day La Follette's magazine appeared, bitterly arraigning both Secretary Ballinger and the Administration. In this issue, aside from censorious editorial matter, was a caustic article by ex-Secretary Gifford, strongly criticizing the present Administration for its attitude towards the Roosevelt veto.

It was only then that the President realized his mistake in judgment, and saw that what would soon die out. He became convinced then and there that the country would not look upon the Pinchot-Ballinger affair as a closed incident so long as muck-raking magazines and newspapers, muck-raking Senators and Representatives, and muck-raking officials and ex-officials were determined to keep alive the issue for the avowed purpose of forcing the Administration to take dictation from some of the men who had been so powerful in the days of Roosevelt.

It was extremely embarrassing to the President to have to admit the country was not in a frame of mind to accept his word as final, equally embarassing to know that muck-rakers were able to keep alive the controversy of this sort by the deliberate manufacture of untruths, but forward to the fact that he must put forth all his own strength to defend himself. It dawned upon him, in that hour, that from the very outset of the controversy within the official family, all the publicity had come from one side, and the other side, to realize that he must put forth what source, or how sympathetic, fact to satisfy the inquisitive public. They demand the facts, the records, and the evidence.

Having reached this conclusion, the President very quickly decided to support the movement for a Congressional investigation of both the Interior Department and the Forest Service. That would enable both sides to produce their respective evidence, and make reply to charges from whatever source. Such a course would gratify the wish of the community, and give to Pinchot, as well as to Ballinger, every opportunity to establish the correctness of his own position and the error of his opponent (for each maintains that the other is wrong).

Delays Will Be Removed.

It was President Taft who induced Senator Flint to introduce the resolution calling for the Graft charges, the Attorney-General's report thereon, and other related papers. This he did to give to the committee a foundation upon which to build, and the fact that the President made this move is proof of the confidence he placed in the investigation under way with the least possible loss of time. There is every indication that such a programme will be followed.

NEW INDUSTRY TO START

MOHAR MILLS AT SELLWOOD ABOUT COMPLETED.

Plant Representing Investment of $50,000 Will Bring Novel Business to Portland.

By February 1 it is expected that the new plant of Multnomah County Mohar Mills, located at the east end of Umatilla street, Sellwood, will be completed and in operation. Machinery has been installed as fast as it is received. One new building, 110 by 100, has been erected in the Mohar fabric mill, and construction of the other buildings used in the plant were secured in the purchase of the ground and plant of the Rose Woolen Scouring Mills. The investment is about $50,000.

It is an entirely new industry, and it is the only plant of the sort west of the Missouri River. Mohar used in the factory will come from different sources, but largely from the Coast counties. Linn and other mohar fabric mills have been turned out. John E. Young, of Portland, is president of the company, and all the investors are Portland men.

ATHLETICS IS CONDEMNED

Muldoon Says They Do More Harm Than Good in Colleges.

New York Times. William Muldoon, the athlete and trainer, who runs a rest home for overworked athletes in the college now, they certainly do the greatest damage. There is no question about it. They do great harm, and they do injure the hearts of young men.

"Athletics do no harm at all if conducted judiciously," he said. "But as they are conducted in the colleges now, they certainly do the greatest damage. There is no question about it. They do great harm, and they do injure the hearts of young men."

"If they were conducted cautiously it would be all right. The athletic heart is no great evil. I failed to get life insurance 19 years ago because they said I had it, and I am still alive and pretty capable. I am as well as any living man of my age, and my heart has stood as many exciting events."

"But the wonder to me has always been that so many college men stand athletics at all as they run them nowadays—not that some of them go to places."

"You say this Yale investigation was brought about by the fact that four men were overcome because they had their hearts in two boat races with Harvard. The remarkable thing is that the men who were overcome were young and they can be that they are young and strong and the very pick of hundreds. They are forced into a tremendous over-exertion, it is bound to leave its mark."

"The trouble is that they are brought to this great exertion too suddenly by far. They should come to it by a long and gradual process, and that is the only way in which the training largely is. That a great many do not break down completely is extraordinary."

"Some of the men insisted that athletics were wrongly conducted in the colleges. It isn't only to the heart they do harm, it is to the mind. That is evidenced by withdrawing the vitality from it to the other parts of the body."

KAISER'S NEW BATHTUB

Designed for Tenements—Can Also Be Used as Dining-Table.

The German Emperor, as is well known, a great admirer of English domestic institutions. When over here he was charmed with the practical way in which the British workman living in modern tenement houses, has the use of a bathroom.

He ordered, therefore, to have plans submitted to him which took particular note of baths in workmen's dwellings, with a view to fit into small flats for small families. The bath which was ultimately adopted is meant to serve a twofold purpose.

This bath is actually already in use on the Continent in different estates, and can, with a clever contrivance of some wooden parts, be changed into a washing tub, and this again can be changed into a bed, thus providing for a big bath in their dwellings, and when not in use for a bath or the washing it is one of the most comfortable places of furniture as the dinner table of the family.

At 79 She Likes Football.

New York Press. Mothers in New York may be thankful enough that the football season is over, but Mrs. A. D. Winship, of Racine, Wis., is an utter stranger to the feelings that dominate them. She is 79 years young, and resides in Columbus University, where she has entered for two courses of psychology and English literature, but even more remarkable than her high school knowledge is the enthusiasm for football she manifested on every opportunity throughout the season. With her spectacles firmly planted on her nose, her gray hair neatly drawn back from her benignant brow, she was a prominent figure among the 'rooters' at every game played on the home grounds. Her presence, at first ridiculed by the other students of her class, was so much taken for granted before the end of the season that it would have been missed seriously had she stayed away from any game. It is pleasant to know her zeal for athletics did not interfere with her studies, and that she stands an excellent chance of getting her diploma before she is much more than 80.

DAILY METEOROLOGICAL REPORT.

PORTLAND, O., Jan. 8.—Maximum temperature, 53.1 degrees; minimum, 31.7 degrees. River reading, S. A. M., 2.5 feet; change in last 24 hours, rise .06 foot. Total rainfall, 0 P. M. to 5 P. M., 0.03 inches; total since September 1, 1909, 22.33 inches; normal, 21.23 inches; deficiency, 1.14 inch. Total sunshine January 8, 12 minutes; possibility, none at sea level, at 5 P. M., 30.23 inches.

PACIFIC COAST WEATHER.

Observations taken at 5 P. M., Pacific time.

Table with columns: Station, Temperature, Wind, State of Weather. Rows include Baker City, Boise, Burke, etc.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The barometer has fallen decidedly over Western Washington, Northern Oregon and Northern California, and another low pressure is approaching the North Pacific coast. This disturbance is too far at sea to determine its magnitude, but it evidently is of sufficient importance to cause rain in Western Oregon and Northern California, and snow in Northern Washington and snow in Northern California. In the high valleys of the Cascade Mountains, since yesterday no rain or snow has occurred in the entire Pacific States, but snow has fallen generally throughout Eastern Oregon, Eastern Washington and Idaho. The temperature has fallen in the Willamette Valley and elsewhere in the Pacific States, elsewhere they have remained nearly stationary. It will be warmer Sunday.

FORECASTS.

Portland and vicinity.—Rain, possibly part snow; warmer, southeasterly winds. Oregon.—Rain or snow west coast portion; warmer, southeasterly winds increasing along the coast. Washington.—Rain, rain or snow east portion; warmer, southerly winds, increasing along the coast. Sunday, warmer. EDWARD A. BEALS, District Forecaster.
