In New York City, which is just now the storm center of suffragette activi-ties, the social side of the movement for "votes for women" is being made much of. Preceding a recent meeting held at the Garden Theater, addressed by Farbes Robertson, the eminent Eng-lish actor, Rev. Anna Shaw, Gertrude Atherton, the California novelist and The consideration of different methods of work resulted in the plan of arranging the news of the week under the heads of governmental, civic, social, literary and scientific, and of having the presi-dent, at each meeting, appoint a mem-ber to each division, who would be responsible, at the next session, for the events occurring under her subject.

Although no regular programme had been arranged for this meeting, there was an interesting discussion of all the salient questions of the day; slavery in Mexico, and the attitude of the United
