actress who comes to the Bungalow sult. Theater this week, has just re-ceived a cable from Sir Herbert Gladtone, new Governor of the South African States, and recently Mome Secretary of Great Britain, congratulating her on people." the establishment and opening of the first juvenile court in London.

Nethersole has labored to this end for many years. When she first visited Denver and was invited by Judge Ben Lindsay to sit on the bench with him and at his suggestion passed upon several cases of juvenile offenders, she realized the opportunity for the introduction into London of a system that might accomplish much good.

Later she visited other cities and other courts, and when she returned to Longonia ourts, and when she returned to London three years ago, called upon Sir William Trelaor, then Lord Mayor, and placed the matter before him. He called Sir Herbert Gladstone into the consultation and both men personally and officially invited her to make a full report to them the following season of the juvenile court extension ago presented in America. nile court system as operated in America. At first the suggestion met with bitter opposition. Last Summer she delivered opposition. Last Summer she delivered lectures in several parts of London on the subject and then, to fill her American contracts, sailed away, believing that fully another year would transpire without definite action in the matter for which she had worked.

On the strength of her records that

On the strength of her reports the American system has now been put into operation in London, however, and the actress believes that it will answer one of the questions concerning London's of the questions concerning London's working class that is now egitating the British mind.

"I believe juvenile court judges have more difficult tasks in these Facific Coast cities than elsewhere," said Miss Nethercities than elsewhere," said Mise Nethersole. "In Los Angeles. San Francisco, Portland and Seattle the large number of Orientals presents a subject which in itself, it seems to me, would occupy almost a lifetime of study. But I believe in the juvenile courts of these cities reposes one of the solutions, and perhaps the real solution of the 'yellow peril' of which I have read so much in American papers.

"Just exactly what influences are brought to bear upon the Oriental mind transplanted into this alien atmosphere is impossible for me to understand without further study; but the old rule of other juvenile courts holds good. Study individual cases. Find out if there be an offender in the sight of the law and then what caused the offense. I believe then what caused the offense. I believe people usually steal to possess something they cannot otherwise obtain. Find out what it is they want. Find out why the child wants it and turn that inclination and taste to some better channel of use-fulness. Find out the disease, treat it, and cure it, as if it were a bodily all-ment

"This is possible with Occidental or Oriental, and as the result of present workings of the juvenile court system, a
