Western Union Discovers That

WIRE SERVICE RESTORED

Indictments Trouble on One Hand,
but to Let Go Business Is Admission That It Has Been in Unlawful Enterprise.

NEW YORK, July 9.—(Special.)—While no authoritative explanation was vouchsafed today as to why the Western Union suddenly restored its stock wire service removed from a large number of places in New York and other Eastern cities on Thursday, it is understood the company had jumped from the frypan into the fire and found the fire hotter than it expected.

When the company withdrew its service it laid itself open to many civil suits for breach of contract. So long as the firms it supplied had paid for service rendered or to be rendered the only defense the company could offer would be that such firms are engaged in an illegitimate business and the burden of proof would have been on the Western Union. As the company has always denied that it had ever supplied information to bucketshops this would have been an admission of guilt.

Attorney Has Big Task.

George H. Fearons, general attorney for the corporation, has the difficult task of plotting the company through the legal waters into which it has been precipitated by the anti-bucketshop crusade of the Department of Justice at Washington.

Mr. Fearons will direct the defense of the Western Union in Baltimore where Judge Stockridge will hear the suit of E. R. Herford & Co., brokers, against the company next week. The Western Union took its wires from this company. The company immediately filed suit alleging it had paid $750 for wire and ticker service for July. Judge Stockridge granted an injunction and interpreted his decision to mean that the wire service should be restored. This has been done.

Indictments Are 42.

The move in the court in Baltimore awakened the Western Union to a new danger. Anxious to escape the penalty of the 42 indictments returned in the District of Columbia, June 10, the company inaugurated a programme of discontinuing wire service to brokers' offices commonly called "bucketshops." The suit of the Baltimore firm immediately suggested the possibility of damage actions. This possibility has frightened the company and what its future policy will be has not been announced.

BOMBS WRECK NEW BRIDGE

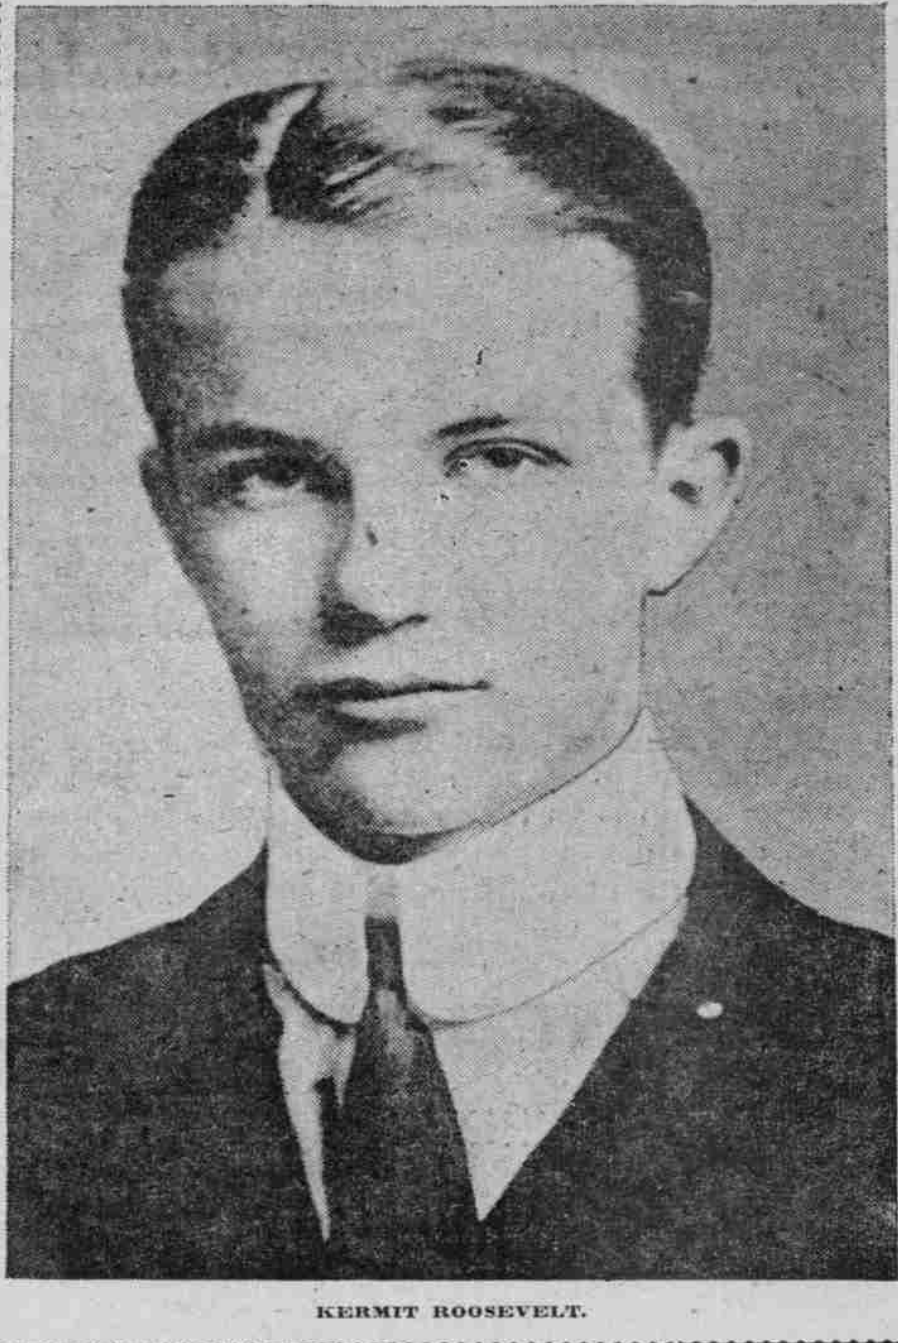

Lehigh Valley R. R. Trestle Blown
Up by Dynamite.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Dynamite bombs placed under the new trestle being built by the Lehigh Valley Railroad along the bay shore of Jersey City exploded early today, badly damaging the steel structure and smashing windows for half a mile around in the Green Hill section. Two 40-foot iron girders were wrenched loose at the first explosion, one of them being driven through a steel car of the New Jersey Central near the trestle. A second explosion 45 minutes later tossed up two more girders, and even a greater amount of concrete construction was thrown up.
