many people to seek the cooler climate of the seashore and Gearhart has not been neglected by the beach comers.

Everywhere in the grove and along the ridge cottages are being opened. The Gearhart Grove is a very beautiful place, paths wind in and out among the trees and chipmunks and birds are constant companions to all who stroll within the shade. The O'Hanna River flows through the wood and more delightful canoeing cannot be imagined. A foot-bridge the wood and more deligniful canceling cannot be imagined. A foot-bridge crosses this stream and leads to still another path, which has been called "Lovers Lane," and which is well deserving of the name. Shrubs and bushes grow at either side and leaning toward one another intermingle their branches, thus forming a delightfully arched bower just high enough and wide enough to conduce to comfortable walking.

In Germany there are today 373 recognized musical composers who belong to a society formed six years ago for the principal purpose of collecting fees for performing rights, says the New York Post. Such fees were gathered in 1900 to the amount of $62,500, an increase of $15,000 over the receipts of the previous year. No less than 80 per cent of the sum collected went to the composers, librettists and publishers, who are included in the society to the goodly number of 76. The number of librettists is not given. Since 1904 the society has collected altogether $220,000. Among the members are Richard Strauss, Engelbert, members are Richard Strauss, Engelbert, Humperdinck and Georg Schumann. Reed Miller, the tenor who sang here last May with Walter Damrosch and his orchestra, has this to say, in an interview printed in a magazine, about the concert in which he took part at Medford, Or. "At Medford, Or., we thought for a time that we wouldn't have any place to sleep. We got in at 5 P. M., only to find every hotel filled, but after walking all over town we finally found a 'tent city' on the outskirts, and so we spent the night under canvas. You see, it was a growing town, and the 'boom' kept it ahead of the hotel facilities. We were nearly frozen, but the warmth of our welcome made up for that. The hall was very small and the solos were punc-tuated by the croaking of frogs in a marsh outside, but they evidently wanted good music, for, figuring on the capacity of the hall, it must have cost each lis-tener about $5 a ticket." Observe the use and position of the word "they," after "frogs." Mr. Miller evidently does not mean that the Medford frogs paid $5 per Miller will likely retort that he was mis-quoted.
