

a foot and a half from the bottom of the rather short skirt, which was composed of plain blue. The yoke and lower part of the elbow sleeves are of white net shot with gold. A smart touch is given by quantities of tiny gilt buttons. Her hat will be white with blue plumes. Another blue garment is her going-away suit of plain tailored serge. The coat is the shortest, swaggar length and the skirt short and on the "mummy" style. Her walking hat is very simple, with a great bright green bow for trimming. Another pretty suit is a white serge with a collar of very Oriental silk. The colors in it embodied even greens and orange.

Then she has lots of morning frocks and chic chapeaus to top them. With a few she will carry a parrot green parasol with an ivory ring the size of a bracelet and two inches wide. One of the parasols is a very heavy tassel with fringe six inches long. In her motor car she has wearing a voluminous coat of tan tweed. Her closely-fitting bonnet is of tan straw, hand made and lined with folds of Gobelin blue silk. All over the top in scattered groups are single cream-colored roses surrounded with deep blue forget-me-nots.

When she asked maids and matrons in to tea the first of the month of June she was attired in a tea gown of cream lace over Dresden silk. A pretty negligee of plaited liberty silk in palest pink. Insets of lace and rosettes of pink baby ribbon make this very fetching. Touches of pink are noticed in her many lingerie blouses and in her evening wraps. One is all pink broadcloth, another of blue with mandarin bands to pastel shades. Over her half trunkful of lingerie many sighed. One girl clamored the articles as "stuffs stuff with miles of ribbon and lace." A pretty touch was given by the sachets. These were of four-inch-wide pink satin ribbon about a foot long and tied in the middle with narrow ribbon. On each was a spray of dainty artificial flowers denoting the odor that emanated from the sachet.

Miss Blanche Schott entertained Tuesday night, prior to her brother, George Schott's, leaving for the Deschutes country. The house was attractive with pink blossoms, coropais and roses, massed with Egyptian file. Prizes were awarded to the following: Miss Clara Fleischman received a gold watch, assisted by Williams a silver pencil, Roy Wennerberg a silver keyring and Gord Eilers an arts and crafts scarfpin. Six tables were played and Miss Schott another of Mrs. Oliver Lutz (Mrs. Cook), Miss Mabel Weel, Miss Lucille Smith and Miss Ruby Crichton.

Dr. and Mrs. William Hiram Foulkes were tendered by the women of the Ladies' Aid and Christian Endeavor societies of the First Presbyterian Church, of which Dr. Foulkes is pastor, a most enjoyable dinner. Dr. Foulkes is just home from abroad. He went especially to be present at the Oberammergau Passion Play and visited in Western Europe and the British Isles.

The craze for chateaux continues to grow and almost every girl here with a penchant for hangings has any number of them. At almost every matinee rows of them may be seen secured with glittering bangles by their fair owners to the back of the seat facing them. As the number of trinkets that could be carried grew to almost gigantic proportions Portland maids kept apace. But the newest trinket is yet to come here, although it may be expected any day. It is none other than the familiar tea ball. One of the most famous fashion leaders won it at bridge the other day—a dainty bit of flageole silver, over which a case of polished silver with her monogram could be clamped. Inside were leaves of the most fragrant tea which could be replaced by milder's favorite brand. She created a sensation at a pretty tea garden when she unfurled the ball from her chateaux and brewed her own cup of tea.

Miss Mabel Weed asked Miss Marguerite Boschke, Miss Ruby Crichton, Miss Blanche Schott, Miss Clara Fleischman, Miss Louisa Williams, Miss Irene Buckwalter, of Mississippi, Miss Gladys Donohoe, Miss Sadye Noyes, Miss Lillian Rourke, George Schott, Charles Von Rhein, Walter Young, Roy Wennerberg, Gus Eilers, Herman Smith, William Salt, Arthur Murphy and Carl Latin in to her home Monday night to play "500." Decorations were in pink, roses and bowls of Japanese lilies being used. Prizes were won by Miss Fleischman and Miss Crichton. Mr. Smith and Mr. Wennerberg.
