Responds to Falsehoods About His Attitude on Assembly.

PORTLAND, Or., July $8.—(To the Editor.)—The Thursday issue of the Democratic newspaper of this city contains an article which states that I was recently opposed to the assembly plan of recommending candidates for public office, but "changed front" upon being "promised" the indorsement for State Senator from Multhomah County. The charge that I have been opposed to the assembly plan is without foundation, for I have advocated the plan dation, for I have advocated the plan dation, for I have advocated the plan since it was first suggested. During the last session of the Legislature I cast my vote for Representative Mari-ner's bill providing for conventions of electors to suggest nominees to the voters of the different parties, and as

THANKS FOR PUBLISHING HAIR FORMULA

Remarkable Results Described by a Reader.

Dear Editor—I want to thank you for the remarkable results I have secured using the hair formula which appeared in a recent issue of your valued paper. As directed, I went to my appeared in a recent issue of your valued paper. As directed, I went to my druggist and had him put up six ounces Eay Rum, two ounces Lavona de Composee and one-half drachm Menthel Crystals. He told me that this preparation was unequalled for hair and scalp troubles, but I did not look for the astonishing benefits which followed. For a long time I have been troubled with dandruff and falling hair, and my hair had become so thin and lifeless that I feared I would become completely bald. I applied the scalp with the finger tips and you can imagine my delight when at the end of the third day I found that the dandruff had completely disappeared and the scalp itching had ceased entirely. Within two weeks my hair had stopped falling and now at the end of eight weeks the thin places are covered with a thick growth of new hair nearly six inches long. For the benefit of others who suffer as I once suffered, I would suggest that you publish the formula again. Gratefully yours.—TINA H. PRATT.

The first taste is similar to a banana, but in eating the almond asserts itself. So fond are the raccoons of it that the limbs of the tree are all scratched up by the voracious little animals in their attempt to get at the fruit. Mr Aggers says that the almondcot will undoubtedly prove a good canner.

CURING PYORRHEA

Very few dentists undertake to cure the dreaded Pyorrhea (Riggs' disease of the gums). Various theories have been advanced by clever men in the profession as to the cause of this disease, and the theories do not all coincide, but in nearly every case they are a unit in saying that there is no cure for Pyorrhea once it obtains hold in the jaw. Those who have tried to cure the disease have subjected the patient to such torture that the cure in most cases has been worse than the disease, and in only a few cases could it be called a cure, even after all the boring and digsing down into the gums to get at the roots of the teeth.

A few years ago, when we announced that we had discovered a cure for Pyorrhea we were laughed at—discredited, but we have worked so many cures in the course of our practice that we can no longer be laughed out of court. We must be reckoned with.

In our discovery of the Alveolar process of supplying missing teeth with teeth as solid and natural as those that nature gave you without the use of a plate, partial plate or so-called bridgework, we found that one of the first problems we must solve was the "loosetesth" problem, for we must have sound teeth to work on in order to make Alveolar teeth successful. We discovered, as we have said, a cure for the Riggs disease, and in so doing completed our discovery and made it practical. We have only to refer to the thousands of satisfied pattents who have been cured in our offices of Pyorrhea to refute the statement made, even at this late date, that the disease cannot be cured.

If you are a victim of this disease and have loose teeth because of it, we want you to come to the nearest one of our seven offices and allow us to make and have loose teeth because of it, we want you to come to the nearest one of our seven offices and allow us to make and have loose teeth because of it, we want you to come to the nearest one of our seven offices and allow us to make and have loose teeth because of it.
