

THOUGH DOOMED TO LIFE OF ROWING, MAN SEEKS DISTINCTION AS TRAMP

Wanderlust, Says Odd Character Known as 'A No. 1.' Is Disease—He Has Written Book, and Pays Boys for Committing Good Resolutions to Memory.

'WANDERLUST' is a disease; it is dangerous and extremely contagious. When it once takes hold it cannot be shaken. There is no treatment, and it hangs on until the loss of arms or legs or injury that leaves the victim a cripple for life suppress the wandering microbe, or death snuffs out the life of both the germ and its host.

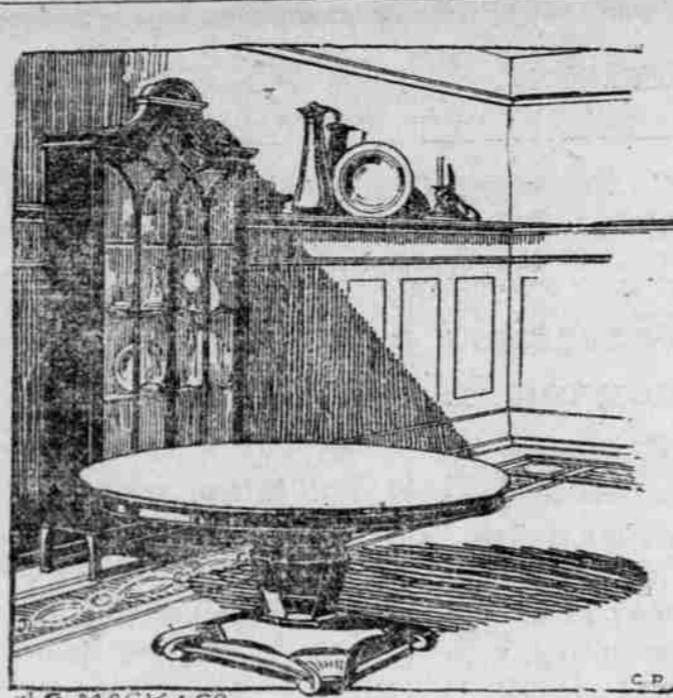

This is the diagnosis of "wanderlust" by "A No. 1," and he ought to know, for he has traveled on the trucks, on the "blind end" and in box-cars for the last 25 years, covering a total of 42,482 miles, and has expended only $7.61 for railroad fares. He diagnosed his own case as aggravated and acute "wanderlust" and pronounced his affliction hopeless. However, he is doing missionary work among boys he meets beating their way about the country, and he has written a book entitled "Life and Adventures of A No. 1," which purports to guide youths and encourage them to stay at home.

Boys Advised to Stay Home. The preface of the book says: "Do not jump on moving trains, even if only to ride to the next street crossing, because this might arouse the 'wanderlust,' besides endangering needlessly your life and limbs."

When A No. 1 finds a runaway boy on the road he talks to him like a father, and as an inducement gives him 25 cents to learn the following and promise to say it every night before he goes to sleep: "I solemnly promise never to associate with anyone in whose company I would be ashamed to pass my mother's home in broad daylight."

Man Not Ordinary Tramp. A No. 1 is not an ordinary tramp. He wears a suit of overalls when he rides the trucks, but when he gets into a city the outer garments are stripped off, uncovering a $30 suit of clothes, white collar and neat tie. He fishes out a small box of polish and a cloth from his pockets and in a moment his patent leather shoes gleam. The next step is to squeeze his overalls into a neat bag, which resembles a camera case, and he is prepared for the street. He might easily be mistaken for a substantial business man as he hurries through the main thoroughfares, taking in the "scenery" at a glance. Then he looks at a heavy gold watch. Time is up. He must hurry on. Back to the station or railroad yards he hastens and is soon on his way to another city.

Wanderers Seldom Reform. There may be a latent roving germ in many boys, and if they once run away from home and get a taste of wanderlust, it is apt to be over with them, for they seldom reform. For the event that assembly candidates receive the nomination. I must admit that this impression is supported by the public statements made by some of the candidates. However, I desire to state most emphatically that I will support all the candidates, assembly or anti-assembly, at the next election in November, who receive the nomination of the Republican party at the primaries, and I shall vote for, work for and heartily support my opponent, J. V. Beach, in the event of his nomination.

Traveler Leaves His Mark.

Where ever he goes he leaves a mark "A No. 1, with an arrow on each side. He uses care to not mutilate himself with his sign of travel, but selects a spot where the marks will not be molested and decorates it with a paintbrush. These marks may be seen along every railroad and often on the face of rocks and in almost inaccessible places."
