

PITTSBURG'S WAY COMMENDED BY R.

Colonel Compliments People for Having Put "Men Higher Up" in Jail.

WORTHY CITIZENS ESCAPE

Amazing Incident of Friend Who Feared Visionary Ones Would Do Injustice Is Told—Western Tour Is Nearly Ended.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 10.—Ex-President Roosevelt, coming to Pittsburgh at the conclusion of his tour through the West, fiercely denounced dishonest politicians and corrupt men of wealth, in an address at a citizenship rally here tonight, and appealed to the people to follow up the work of reform which they have begun.

"The people that hurt Pittsburgh are the people that are corrupt," he said. "The crowd which filled the music hall at the exposition grounds, cheered him wildly as he spoke."

Prison for Men of Wealth.

"You first put the wealthy corrupt business men in stripes," he went on amid loud applause. "Men of wealth who, after coming out of the penitentiary still had their wealth, were sent to the penitentiary by you. You have sent that man, the crooked man, the big business man, to the penitentiary just as you have sent the crooked politician to the penitentiary."

When the question is one of honesty, "all American citizens should stand together," he said.

The last day was one of the most spectacular of Colonel Roosevelt's long trip. Leaving Cincinnati in the morning, he cut across Ohio into West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania. At the several short stops made, throngs were on hand to greet him. The last of the rear platform speeches of the trip was made at Steubenville, this afternoon.

The ex-President talked about the homey virtues which have been his text many times before.

Gourd Resembles Big Stick.

At London, O., a man crowded up close to the platform, holding a gourd, which resembled the "big stick," the colonel laughed and took it in his arms and held it there while he talked about corporations.

Thousands of Pittsburgh people sacrificed their usual dinner hour this evening and crowded downtown streets to welcome the distinguished guest, who had not paid Pittsburgh a visit for more than eight years.

After an informal dinner he was driven eastward, where from a historic balcony from the Monongahela House, facing the river of that name, he addressed an enormous crowd.

From this rostrum Henry Clay, the late King Edward (when Prince of Wales), General Grant and the late Presidents, Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley, have addressed the Pittsburgh people.

History Is Inspiration.

Standing where these notable figures in history had stood, Colonel Roosevelt viewed the sea of humanity before him, the waters of the Monongahela shimmering in the flood of electric light from surrounding buildings.

"I have seen many extraordinary sights in the last two and a half weeks, but I have not nothing like this," he said. "I have a peculiar feeling in speaking from this historic balcony. The many great names associated with this place and so many National memories of which we are proud, spur us on to action in our time, but they are worse than useless if we treat them merely as excuses for idleness in ourselves."

"We of today have many great problems and we must face them as our fathers and forefathers faced the problems of their generation. Our greatest problem is to secure rigid honesty in business and politics, and I congratulate Pittsburgh on what Pittsburgh has done. That man is the true benefactor who exposes crookedness, and who brings out of public life the crook, great or small."

Women Add to Applause.

The cheers which greeted the colonel kept him on his feet most of the time, bowing his acknowledgments.

At Exposition Hall a "citizenship rally" awaited the colonel's coming. Five thousand men jumped and danced and waved their hats and yelled themselves hoarse as the guests ascended to the platform. The crowd struck up "A Hot Time" and sang it anew. Women helped out in the ovation, too, for in boxes on either side were reservations for the leaders of the prominent women's civic clubs and civic organizations.

It was five minutes before Mayor Magee and President English, of the civic committee, were allowed to make introductory speeches. Over the stage from which Colonel Roosevelt spoke hung a huge map of the world, on which were outlined black lines showing Colonel Roosevelt's travels since he left the White House, over Africa, Europe and America.

Pittsburg Typically American.

The colonel said in part: "I have always liked Pittsburgh. I think that Pittsburgh represents in many respects an epitome of the American people. It has the characteristics of our people developed to an unusual degree, energy, power, force, keen business intelligence, rigid industry, immense versatility of mind, all of the qualities of a vigorous, masterful people. I wish I could stop there, but there are certain American traits which you all possess that are less desirable."

"As a nation we have sometimes tended to think only of the things of the body; as a nation we have sometimes taken a hard materialistic, self-righted pride being merely practical and hot dreamers."

"The short-sighted men, the timid men and the men of the sort who always turn, when such a work as that which this association has done under Mr. English has been accomplished, and say: 'You ought not to do that; you hurt Pittsburgh.' The people that hurt Pittsburgh are the people that are corrupt."

"It was my good fortune to have a connection with the beginning of the inquiry in this city that developed the extraordinary crookedness. At that time I was President, and after the correspondence one or two of your representative citizens came to me and said that they had every reason to believe that an examination of certain banks would disclose a scandalous connection between certain business men and certain politicians to rob the city. And they asked me if I could be straight and honest."

"I said I certainly could, so I did not let the Treasury Department—I do not tell anybody what was to be done—but I asked the Department to give me a man whom they knew to be straight. I got the man and sent him here. I was very much amused over one incident.

Friend's Apical Vain.

"An acquaintance, almost a friend of mine in a political position, came to me and said that he understood that some visionary people were trying to cause trouble and tried to influence me not to take action against worthy citizens. He hoped I wouldn't do it. I told him he could be sure I would join with him in that no worthy citizen was scotched and that I would expect him to join with me to see that I got at every crook that I possibly could. Well, as I say, my part was merely a very slight part, but I think I may say, Mr. President, the investigation made by the United States Government has opened the way to discovery of corruption. You have put nearly a score of men in the penitentiary or in jail. You have convicted men from about double that number."

"You have others under indictment. And I want to point out, and as a matter of fact, you not only have convicted the politicians, not only got the small man, but you got the men higher up."

ACTS OF VIOLENCE DENOUNCED

Colonel Would Be Union Man, but Would Not Use Coercion.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 10.—Coming today to the scene of the street-car riots which kept Columbus in a state of disorder for weeks, ex-President Roosevelt, in a speech here, denounced in the strongest terms the acts of lawlessness and the men who committed them. The state capitol is still being guarded by the militia and Colonel Roosevelt was escorted by United States troops from the Columbus barracks.

As the strike is still on, J. C. Metcalf, chairman of the Roosevelt reception committee, asked President Taft to assign the regular troops to escort the ex-President today and the President consented.

The colonel raised his voice to the highest pitch and, with fists clenched and his face set sternly he told them that it was their first duty to repress lawlessness.

Mayor Marshall, of Columbus, whose conduct of the police force during the strike has been the subject of much discussion, said to Colonel Roosevelt after he had finished his address:

"You do not know the strength you have given me."

Colonel Roosevelt proceeded at the head of a parade to the park, half a mile from the station, where he delivered his speech. Mayor George S. Marshall occupied a seat on the platform from which Colonel Roosevelt spoke.

"As soon as I entered Ohio and ever since, I have from time to time been addressed by letter and even personally by both sides, asking me to come to Columbus and speak," said Colonel Roosevelt. "I will say frankly that I do not like to come here, but I like still less dodging, and so I have come."

"If we stop content with the mere establishment of law and order, we fall to do our further duty, which is by thorough-going investigation to find out whether justice has been denied and injustice committed, and then to use the whole power of the Government to right any wrong that has been done."

"Let the employes remember that it may be well to the interest of some of their leaders, for political or other reasons, to have lawlessness and disorder continue, but that it is pre-eminently against the interest of the workmen themselves."

"Of course, to dismiss men for asking for an increase of wages, would be such an infamy that I can hardly believe it occurred, but you should find out definitely. To dismiss men for membership in or for proposing to join a union would be almost as bad. The union is just as much a necessity of our modern industrial system as the corporation itself. Both must obey the law, but each in a necessary. Under modern conditions it is often necessary that there should be collective bargaining on the part of the men, and this can only come through the union."

"I am an honorary member of a union myself. If I were a wage-earner engaged in manual labor, I should certainly join the union. Union men have no right to force other wage workers into the union. As was so well set forth in the admirable report of the anthracite strike commission, such action is as much a violation of right as is the so-called 'secondary boycott.'"

"But it is equally an outrage for the employer to discriminate against the unions and to fail to work with them in a spirit of cordial good faith on both sides. Moreover, if your present arbitration law is not sufficiently stringent, make it more stringent, and if it is unconstitutional, amend the constitution. Do not wait to remedy number of present wrongs until the constitution is amended."

"In conclusion, friends, your duties are two-fold: first, at once and without equivocation and hesitation, to enforce the law as it is; second, to see that the law is obeyed in letter and spirit; second, as soon as this result has been achieved, turn at once to the great question of justice and exert your whole power to find out the facts, treating any refusal to give you all the facts as a confession of guilt."

T. R. Plans Tour of Texas.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 10.—Colonel Roosevelt, chairman of the Republican State Executive Committee, who is here conferring with the local Republican leaders, announced today that ex-President Roosevelt would tour Texas next March. Colonel Lyon will meet Colonel Roosevelt in New York next January and the itinerary for the simple tour will then be arranged.

SPIRITS MUST STAND TEST

Psychological Society Wants Proof James Sends Message.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The fact that several spiritualistic mediums recently asserted that they have received messages from the late Professor William James, of Harvard, one of whose favorite themes was the possibility of communication between the dead and the living, has led the Metropolitan Psychological Society to propose a test as to the validity of all such assertions. The society offers a prize of $1000 to any medium who will obtain from the spirit of Professor James, when it speaks through them, a statement of the contents of a certain letter sent by him a few days before his death to W. S. Davis, secretary of the society. Mr. Davis has the letter from Professor James in his safe. No one else has seen it or has received from him any inkling of its contents. The president of the Psychological Society, in making public the prize offer, makes the following comment on the alleged "message" thus far put forward by various mediums:

"The great difficulty with all the messages which have so far been published is that they are vague, indefinite and trite, and could have been concocted by anyone. Such alleged communications have invariably followed the demise of all persons of note in the spiritualistic world, but the very simple test herein proposed will considerably narrow down the question and may easily be within the capability of any person actually in communication with the spirit of the late Professor James."

"We recognize in Professor James a great and open-hearted investigator. We have striven to maintain his spirit of open-mindedness toward all assertions and have endeavored to give them a full hearing and fair trying out. That we have never encountered any phenomenon of a superhuman kind does not wholly discourage us from looking into any fresh assertions advanced as to the existence of such."

CABINET CALLED TO MEET

Three Days' Session to Precede Taft's Speech in New York.

BEVERLY, Mass., Sept. 10.—A call for the first meeting in two months of President Taft's Cabinet has been sent out and the members will report in Washington November 24.

The Cabinet members will be guests of the President at the White House and the session will be practically continuous for three days, after which the President will go to New York to speak before the meeting of the National League of Republican Clubs.

LORIMER QUILTS HIS CLUB

(Continued From First Page.) The number remains that there are a large number of us who believe that the organization should make Senator Lorimer a public apology for the insult he suffered at the hands of the club's president.

"If Colonel Roosevelt could so far forget that he is presumed to be a gentleman, that is his affair; but the club certainly should have refused to be a party to such a breach of ethics or common courtesy. Whether we shall resign from the organization is between us and the club. The public has no right to know anything about it, any more than it has to pry into a man's home life when that home life cannot be construed as affecting the public in any way."

CLASSED, THE BEST.

Terrible Suffering

Eczema All Over Baby's Body. "When my baby was four months old his face broke out with eczema, and at sixteen months of age, his face, hands and arms were in a dreadful state. The eczema spread all over his body. We had to put a mask or cloth over his face and tie up his hands. Finally we gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a few months he was entirely cured. Today he is a healthy boy." Mrs. Inez Lewis, Baring, Maine. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures blood diseases and builds up the system. Get it today in usual liquid form or chocolate tablets called Sarsatabs.

GREAT THROG HEARS HIM

Catholic Archbishop, at Montreal Congress, Says Scientific Investigation Into God's Work Is Not Needed.

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—A throng of 75,000 persons assembled on Fletcher's Field today for the first open-air ceremony of the Eucharistic Congress.

The preacher of the day was Monsignor O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, who, in his sermon, said in part:

"As truly as on that first Christmas night the tender child of Mary lay within her loving arms, is Jesus Christ on King with us and before us, there in the sacrament of his love."

"The time is too precious and too sacred to pass in fruitless questioning. There is plenty of time for scientific inquiry and merely mental investigation of the how and why of God's wonderful dealings with men. Today we only hear the omnipotent words of the miracle of his power. 'This is my body; this is my blood.'"

"Either God is not God at all and the whole universe is mere fiction or these words are true. He who doubts must take his choice. We stand with God's eternal promises, sublimely confident and perfectly sure that what he says is true.

"Oh! Catholics, stop for a moment and think what would our lives be today if the priesthood of Christ were extinguished upon earth and never again till the end of time the Eucharistic sacrifice should be offered upon our altars. How destitute would all the world seem then. What could the inventions of man ever produce to fill the aching void in our hearts thus created. The very thought makes us shudder. Thanks to God's infinite goodness, this awful anathema will never come upon us."

For Influence $100 in a Diamond Beats $1000 in the Bank

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

That in buying a diamond how absolutely true you have to depend upon the knowledge of your jeweler for the value you receive? What sort of Diamond you get doesn't necessarily have to do with the honesty of the jeweler's intention—he probably intends to do the very best he can for you; it depends rather on his ability to give you a good stone (and not charge too much for it). Few jewelers have the expert knowledge to protect themselves in their buying, therefore can give you no better than they buy themselves.

$10 REWARD!

—Will be paid to the person writing me the best criticism of the funny story in this advertisement—criticism of age is barred.

Notice—The advertisement really deals with MURRAYMEAD.

I wish that some higher power would give me the ability to make some of the slow people see the future of this city, as not only I, but others who are informed on Coast conditions do.

It would take much more space than I will devote to it here to go fully into the subject, but I want to go on record with one prophecy:

Portland in the next two years will see an advance in values, and an activity generally that will make some good old staid Portlanders' hair stand on end.

Paste that in your hat along with your private opinion that I am crazy, and see what the next two years will bring forth.

Five years ago in Los Angeles people were (as they are now, and will be five years hence) telling you how property was too high and that it was bound to come down—that was when you could have bought property on Broadway for between $3000 and $1000 per foot.

Today they are making leases on Broadway at a valuation of $1,000 per foot.

And of course, there are people who say that it is all wrong, too high, and that they can't do it and live financially. But the answer to all that is paralleled in the story of the man who was arrested and put in jail and was told by his attorney, after hearing the charge, "Not to worry, dear fellow, as they couldn't arrest you for that," and who replied, "That, notwithstanding, he seemed to be in jail just the same."

So there you are—only property is not too high, and the fact is that it will continue to get dearer every day.

There's MURRAYMEAD now—eight minutes out on beautiful Hawthorne avenue by way of the new bridge—has every improvement, down to hard-surface streets and shade trees—selling on easy terms, and at the best and priced at an average of only $10 per foot.

Positively and emphatically it is ridiculous and absurd—worth every cent of $100 per foot today on any comparative scale of values, in other Coast cities.

But the thing to do is to come out today and see.

Take Hawthorne-avenue car to East Twenty-fourth and Hawthorne and walk three blocks south to my tract office. Open all day today.
