

HINTS ON WARM LITTLE HOUSEGOWNS THAT ANY CLEVER WOMAN MAY MAKE

NOW that the winter chill is in the air and the rains are coming down steadily, the boudoir robe and the house gown of cozy warmth are assuming added importance.

Many of the most charming of house gowns are made from passe overings, with a little fresh trimming, and the present elasticity of style admits of all manner of designs being worked out.

A modish way of emphasizing the short waistline is by the raised belt, made of a single width of some ornamental material, or several narrow widths of garniture laid together closely.

Another charming negligee affair is an empire robe of old rose silk and wool crepe, trimmed with bands of silver, on a surplus of gray chiffon.

A resourceful Portland girl who had no hat exactly to her liking for wear with her stunning new gown of black velvet, and in the meantime, put into thinking cap with very happy results.

gathered the other in with a frill at the top, with a seam up the front to shape the slipper to the foot.

ing offered, there is really an astonishing variety of dainty things for the boudoir that may be fashioned of the broader widths of ribbon.

The sweeping craze for veiling effects gives one the opportunity of utilizing good materials which are only slightly worn or faded, by using shirred fresh over such portions as are not fresh and uniform in color.

The kimono sleeves, which has practically passed in the more formal costumes, is still to the fore in the modish house frock.

Effective Styles in Blouses

THE woman who has old lace waists on hand, or a skirt or two in figured or plain silk, may now find use for these dilapidated fineries.

By the way, the coiffure ornaments and accessories are coming more and more to the fore, and it is contending to increase in height and size.

In the East there is particular objection to that type of coiffure ornament known as the "mob cap," which is really an all-enveloping cap of dainty lace with silk roses or other trimmings edged with a full frill.

passion for fringes of all descriptions is on the increase instead of the wane.
