

RETIRING JURIST HIGHLY HONORED

Judge Cleland Presented With Token of Esteem by Local Attorneys.

RECIPIENT DEEPLY MOVED

Speech of Presentation Gives Tribute to Qualities Which Have Made Judge Cleland Honored by His Associates.

Upon the retirement of John B. Cleland, Presiding Judge of the State Circuit Court, from the bench yesterday morning 200 representative attorneys of the city presented the jurist with a handsome hammered-silver service. Attorney Dolph, spokesman for the lawyers, welcomed Judge Cleland back to the ranks of practicing lawyers in an expressive address, and Judge Cleland, visibly moved by the honor paid him, responded in a few words.

Attorney Dolph, in making the presentation, said:

"May it please the court: The present occasion would seem to demand that the ordinary business of the court be suspended for a moment in order that I may make some observations, personal to the Presiding Judge, and I move the court that such be the rule."

"Judge Cleland, it is the common understanding among the members of the bar that with the close of this day's session of the court you will retire from the position you have so long and so worthily held, and they have generously afforded me the very great pleasure of giving expression to the universal sentiment which obtains at the bar of this court in contemplation of such retirement."

Career One of Honor.

"You brought to the high position from which you are about to retire, experience, judicial temperament, and, more than all, that intellectual integrity necessary to a judicial mind. Your decisions have been characterized by fearlessness, fairness, and accuracy, and the ability of a high order. You now put off the ermine with which your fellow citizens invested you, leaving neither spot nor stain nor shadow upon it. You will retire from the bench in the full consciousness of duty well performed."

"I congratulate you, sir, that you will resume the practice of your profession while yet the tenders of friendship and affection which bind you to your professional brethren are green and fragrant, and while you are still in the full tide of useful activity."

"On behalf of my professional brethren I welcome you, and, in evidence of the cordiality of that welcome and the high esteem with which they hold you as a lawyer and a judge, I beg you to accept this token of their admiration and respectful regard, representing as it does the fraternal greetings of nearly 200 of their number, each one of whom wishes you a happy and prosperous New Year."

Judge Cleland, replying, said:

"This token of consideration, friendship, respect and confidence is and will be very dear to me. The tender was exceptionally happy in that it contained a welcome back to the ranks of the profession and an assurance of their good will. That comes close home to me who have occupied this seat for 13 years."

"When one comes to administer the composite machinery of human justice he finds it at best a tangled skein. When a man sits on the bench and hears cases there is a light from all sides, and no matter what personal interests may prompt him to do, there is but one path to follow, and that is justice. He who attempts to follow it often finds that he is walking alone. It is with a warm heart that I accept this token, and one thing I want to say is that I am glad to have your confidence."

Judge Cleland Deeply Moved.

Blaming the charms of Henrietta de Stearns for the loss of her husband's love, Mrs. Stearns has sued the alleged affinity of her spouse for $25,000 damages. The suit was filed in the State Circuit Court yesterday morning.

Mrs. Stearns alleges that a year after marrying Harry S. Stearns in Seattle she found that his heart had been won by Mrs. de Stearns, a divorcee, who is said to be wealthy. Ayers is a conductor on the Oregon Electric line, and has been accused by his wife of visiting Mrs. de Stearns on occasions when he informed her that he had been called upon by the railway company to make extra trips.

Mrs. Ayers complains that the widow, by her blandishments, charmed her husband and destroyed the happiness of her home. As a result, she alleges, she has suffered great mental anguish and that her health and happiness have been shattered. She asserts that her husband has associated with Mrs. de Stearns since last October, and that on November 21, 1910, particularly he was in her company after he had informed her that his railway duty had called him away from home.

The suit of Mrs. Ayers follows the recent arrest of her husband and Mrs. de Stearns to prevent them from going to San Francisco together. They were released in the Justice Court last week.

STREETCAR COMPANY SUE

Man Carried by Station Seeks Damages of $10,000.

Complaining of being compelled to alight from a streetcar at a point far beyond his destination, J. H. Keller, in an amended complaint filed yesterday, sues the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company for $10,000 damages for injuries he claims to have sustained by walking on the company's tracks.

The complainant alleges that after being put off the car at 10 o'clock at night at a place where he was a stranger, he was forced, not knowing his way, to follow the tracks back to Morrow. He fell into an excavation, he alleges, and was so badly injured that he suffers excruciating pain whenever he stoops and is unable to follow his occupation, which, at the time of the accident, was netting him $2.50 a day. Keller asks to be awarded $12,500 to make up for his lost work, in addition to the $10,000 sought as damages.

SAILOR FREE ON APPEAL

French Ship Waits at Astoria for Circuit Court Decision.

Ernest Bruce, a member of the crew of the French ship Michel, found guilty in Justice Court of defrauding the sailor boarding-house conducted by Grant & White, was released by State Circuit Court Judge Kavanaugh on the ground that the alleged offense for which he was tried did not constitute a crime. The mariner was released from the county jail and left immediately for Astoria to join his ship, which waited for the decision in his case.

An error in the complaint against Bruce led to his release. The charge as made by the District Attorney accused the sailor of surreptitiously departing after contracting a debt. Judge Kavanaugh held that under the Oregon law this was not an offense unless the accused man took his baggage with him and in the sailor's case his baggage was left with the sailor boarding-house men.

Bruce contended that he was not shipped by Grant & White, but that he signed articles on his own account. He alleged that he was struck by "runners" for the boarding-house after his arrest on board ship.

This incident, said Attorney George Shepherd, who represented the sailor, and admission by Grant & White that they have not taken out a license to conduct a sailor boarding-house, may result in the arrest of Grant & White for conducting such an institution without a permit.

Bruce owed Grant & White $10 for his keep at their establishment and was fined $20 in the lower court.

View to Development.

The Forest Service is going outside of the timber, according to the annual report of the Forester, and now has well formulated plans for seeding ranges that have been depleted and cutting grazing privileges to acres that hitherto have been untouched for lack of transportation and water, and is conducting experiments in handling a surprise in the contents of the report. The report shows an enormous

DEATH OF GIFTED ACTOR

MOURNED IN PORTLAND

Frank Worthing, Remembered by Early Theater-Goers, Noted for His Successes in Wide Variety of Roles.

THE death of Frank Worthing, actor, brings reminiscences of the days in early Portland theatrical history when he appeared at the Marquam as leading man with the old Frawley stock company.

It was in 1897 that Mr. Worthing became especially well known here, and theater-goers of the older generation say they never listened to a more gifted and versatile actor. He established himself in the good opinion of Portland audiences, and while quiet and retiring, was likable and made many friends.

Friends of players in the old Frawley company included Harry Corson, Clarke, now a prominent Eastern stock manager and producer, and T. Daniel Frawley, known to all ends of the theatrical world. Still another was Phoebe McAllister, whose death occurred last year in California. Eleanor Robson, who is now Mrs. August Belmont, was a player of minor roles, and Blanche Bates, one of the best-known actresses on the stage today, was ingenue with the company then. Macklyn Arbuckle and also Midge Carr Cook, Eleanor Robson's mother, were with the Frawley players. Mr. Worthing appeared in Portland as Christopher Colt in "Christopher, Jr.," as Lieutenant Everett in "The Great Unknown," a role in which he succeeded in pleasing the most critical audience, as John Van Buren in "The Character Ball," as Jack Hammer in "The Highest Bidder," and as Captain Von Vinck in "The Two Escutcheons," one of his best-liked roles.

For several years prior to his death Mr. Worthing had suffered from tuberculosis of the throat, and in the last two seasons had been forced to discontinue work at various times. Although an English actor, Mr. Worthing had appeared on the American stage almost as much as on the English, his first visit to this country occurring in 1894, when he came to join Augustin Daly's company. After that time his career was more American than English.

amount of work done by the Federal Government in the interests of the stock industry. The Forest Service desires that all available range be used, but the report expresses the opinion that range, as other resources, should be so handled as to increase permanently. Along the line of policy advocated to make forest land grow heavier stands of timber, it is proposed to make the range support more stock. With this idea in view plans have been outlined and experiments conducted in the interests of the stock industry, which are calculated to replenish the range with more nutritious and more abundant forage.

PIONEER WOMAN IS DEAD

Mrs. Lucy Hurd Schuyler Known for Her Philanthropic Work.

In the death of Mrs. Lucy Hurd Schuyler last Tuesday, Portland lost an old resident who numbered very many friends of pioneer stock. Born in Ohio in 1833, Miss Hurd came to Portland as a guest of her cousin, the late Henry W. Corbett. Two years later she was married to Philip C. Schuyler, Jr., prominently identified with insurance interests. Three children were born to them—Mrs. William C. Alvord, Mrs. Frederick G. Wheeler and another daughter who died in childhood. During her long residence in Portland Mrs. Schuyler devoted herself to charitable and philanthropic work. Her ideals of life were high and she lived up to them. To a wide circle bound by long-established ties of affection and friendship there is distinct loss in this good woman's leave-taking.

BELOVED RESIDENT DIES

Host of Friends Mourn Passing of Mrs. John W. Skans.

Mrs. John W. Skans, widow of the late Rev. John W. Skans, who was buried December 23 last, had been a resident of Portland 27 years. She arrived in 1883 from Jamestown, N. Y., and was engaged in church work most of the time. In 1903 Mrs. Skans suffered from nervous prostration and had been an invalid for the last seven years. She was kindly remembered by a host of friends who provided "surprises" very often while she was an invalid.

Five children survive, four of age and the youngest 17 years old.

Mrs. Skans' eldest son will graduate at the University of Washington next Spring.

Mrs. Skans' children will continue to reside in their present home.
