

The Oregonian

Published at Portland, Oregon, Postoffice at Second-Class Matter. Subscriptions: In Advance...

PORTLAND, SUNDAY, APRIL 23, 1911.

THE UNPLACATED SOUTHWEST.

The breach between Seattle and her neighbors in Southwestern Washington seems to be widening. The Development League Associations of the Southwest will not be represented at the banquet which Seattle proposes to give as a peace offering.

LOWER "BACK HAIL" RATE.

Much has been printed recently about the preparations that the transcontinental railroads were making for meeting the competition of the Panama Canal which in the not far distant future will be a tremendous factor in rate-making.

THE PREPARATION OF SERMONS.

The Reverend John Henry Jowett, the British pastor who has just been imported from London to supply the pulpit of the First-Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York, informed his congregation that he wants his mornings to himself.

state Commerce Commission by Mr. Tol of this city. It is shown that under present tariffs the rate per-ton-mile from Chicago and Middle Western points is only about one-half the rate from Portland to the territory now invaded by the Eastern jobbers and manufacturers.

NOT "DIRECT" METHOD.

One might confidently expect a discreet and carefully preserved silence on the part of those opponents of direct election of United States Senators who are numbered among the constituents of one William Lorimer. It is therefore with some surprise that we read in the Chicago Inter-Ocean a very outspoken criticism of the fruits of the "direct" method that has been attained in certain Western states through circumvention of the Constitution.

THE SPHINX AND ITS RIDDLE.

Some writers whose zeal outruns their knowledge a little, perhaps, speak of Professor George Andrew Reisner as the discoverer of the Sphinx as "solving the riddle of the ages." He has scarcely done that. By some red paint on its ear and the manner in which the hair is arranged, Professor Reisner positively identifies the face of the Sphinx as that of Chephren, or Khafre, as Breasted calls him.

THE THEATRE.

It is a part of the stress of present-day life that people must encounter many dangers—such as the bursting of a tank car of gasoline at St. Louis yesterday.

except that they can be traced back to the same king. From the gateway there was an avenue leading to the pyramid temple and the pyramid itself, which was, of course, built for his tomb.

PAIN, PLEASURE AND HABIT.

In a little book on ethics which we have been reading the following sentence occurs among other bits of wisdom: "The pursuit of pleasure is the persistent purpose of every individual."

THE THEATRE.

There is no rose without its thorn. Without its cruel thorn, no pleasure grows. Without some grief to fill us, in words of bliss.

It is a part of the stress of present-day life that people must encounter many dangers—such as the bursting of a tank car of gasoline at St. Louis yesterday.

THE THEATRE.

There is no rose without its thorn. Without its cruel thorn, no pleasure grows. Without some grief to fill us, in words of bliss.

It is a part of the stress of present-day life that people must encounter many dangers—such as the bursting of a tank car of gasoline at St. Louis yesterday.

THE THEATRE.

There is no rose without its thorn. Without its cruel thorn, no pleasure grows. Without some grief to fill us, in words of bliss.

TOPICAL VERSE

The Hat Parade. The wondrous, swell, church hat parade. We see today. And here are hats of every shade.

Scraps and Jingles

Man in a restaurant sent back the saddle-of-mutton he had ordered because it had a leathery taste. My idea of an "impressionist" is the burglar who takes a wax model of the keyhole.