Mrs. Amy Crocker Gouraud owns one of the most wonderful emeralds in the world. It is as big as a boy's marble, and its base if it were cut in half would and its base if it were cut in half would be the size of a sliver quarter. Mrs. Gouraud was well known to the gay life of New York for a good many years. She is now on her way to Paris to have some wonderful gowns made which she will use when she makes her debut on the professional stage. She has long been an amateur actress of renown. Belmont has opened at Hempstead, L. h. a school of agriculture for women which she calls the Brookhoit School. The estate contains about 200 acres, and was laid out by Duchone, the landscape architect. Mrs. Laura D. Williams is the instructor. The students live in a farmhouse which contains a reception-room, kitchen and dining-room and a farmhouse which contains a reception-room, kitchen and dining-room and a second secon terson's new problem play. The play deals with the problem of divorce. Its success is problematical, because it is so unusual in treatment that it cannot be judged by ordinary standards. But Miss Efflott's success in it is unquestionable. Mr. Robertson has made a fortune for himself and for the author. Jerome K. GERMAN HOUSE OF THE MIDDLE AGES," FROM-SEEING EUROPE BY AUTOMOBILE."

Quite an entertaining book, being the story of a 5000-mile motor trip through France, Switzerland, Germany through France, Switzerland, Germany Italy, with an excursion into Andorra, Corfu, Dalmatia and Montenegro. The author is an American lawyer, and he and his wife, whom he calls Beamer, take the trip together, and such a good time they have! They called their auto the Get There, and it was a two-seated, four-cylinder, 28-horsepower roadster, with a folding seat in the rear. The with a folding seat in the rear. The various places visited are intelligently described, and there are many historical allusions made. The opinion is given that so far as good roadmaking is concerned, the long, white ribbon between Havre and Rouen is the finest highway in the world."

highway in the world."

The book has 32 full-page flustrations, and 389 pages. Mr. Merlweather says that he used one gallon of gasoline for every 13 miles traveled, and that nowhere in Europe did he see a road so bad that an auto could not be propelled over it. "There was never propelled over it. "There was never the slighest danger of sinking deep in mud, and of having to hire horses to pull us out—a fate which may befall a motorist within a dozen miles of almost every American city," writes our author. The appendix gives interesting particulars as to distances and road conditions in the 21 runs late, which conditions, in the 31 runs into which the trip was divided. The 5080 miles were run comfortably in 100 days, and the total expense for boxing the auto, ocean freight, repairs, off, tires and gasoline is given as $528.67.

Gettysburg, by Captain B. K. Beecham. $1,75. Hiustrated. A. C. McClurg & Co.,

Of the battle of Gettysburg, fought Of the battle of Gettysburg, fought in July, 1863 and called the pivotal battle of the Civil War, there have been many reviews and criticisms, but one of the most competent and fearless of them all is this book of Captain Beecham's. He fought in that historic battle as a soldler of the First or "Iron" Brigade, First Division, First Corps, Army gade, First Division, First Corps, Army of the Potomac, and takes the ground that the "high tide" of the Confederacy was reached in the battle of July 1, 1863, and that Pickett's charge, July 3, 1863 was not the "high tide" but a costly blunder for the South. Lee is nictured as a fine defensive fighter. Scandinavian, East Seventh and Ankeny streets—Rev. C. Eriksen, partor. Preaching services, 11 and 7:30; prayer meeting Thursday evening. 7:30. July 1, his army might have smashed Meade before reinforcements could have arrived. Instead of the 5000 troops in Pickett's charge, it is thought that 40,000 men, unsupported, could not have carried the position. General Hunt's judgment in holding the Federal artillery fire until the proper moment is commended, and Captain Beecham thinks that General Meade was not a great General.

The Boy Gardeners, Illustrated, Boys Gar-In 1887, in the south part of Dayton. O. was a wild district called Slidertown, which was known as a hopeless place, because it sheltered a graveyard, pestwhich was known as a hopeless place, because it sheltered a graveyard, peathouse and a gang of had boys. The latter threw stones, broke windows, and ran wild, because they had too much idle time on their hands and didn't know what to do with it. The neighbors hit upon a new idea. The Slidertown land was plowed up, and boys were put to work on it to grow vegetables for the marker. The movement was a great work on it to grow vogetables for the market. The movement was a great success, and prizes that were offered for the best garden made each boy a hardworking unit for his particular garden. One boy raised $105 worth of vogetables in one season. This little book, sent by the National Cash Begister Company, of Particol On gives various boys' exof Dayton, O., gives various boys' ex-periences in growing vegetables, and the reading is an eye-opener. Why cannot this idea of gardening by boys be carried on on a larger scale not in this city alone, but in all the towns of

The Pan American Union-Peace, Friendship, Commerce, by John Barrett, director of the Pan American Union, Washington, D. C.

Beautifully illustrated and clearly printed on thick, white paper, this con-venient book is all that it implies to be—a clear account of those diplomatic activities which have for their founda-tion stone the well-being and general peace of the different nations in South America. The beautiful building erect-America. The beautiful building erected at Washington, D. C., at a cost of $1,000,000, chiefly through the generos-$1,000,000, chiefly through the generosity of Andrew Carnegie, and known as the Pan-American Union, is interestingly described. One picture shows the planting of the peace tree in the patio of the building referred to, and among the distinguished personages grouped together are President Taft and Mr. Barrett. Many inquiries are often made in regard to the subject now under review—South American peace—and this book should be the answer.

The Tents of Trouble, by Damon Runyon, Desmond Fitzgerald, Inc., New York City,

Mr. Runyon is a Kansas young man who has had both newspaper and mili-tary experience. He is also one who has wandered far, and has had various strange social ups and downs. In this attractive book of poems of his he presents about 50 poetic offerings, all high class and well worth reading. Many of these poems have already appeared in newspapers and magazines, and admir-

The most notably excellent of the poems are: "The Spirit of You," "The Has-Been," "Song of the Strikebreakers," "Song of the Bullet" and "The Ladies in the Trenches," In several instances Mr. Hunyon cleverly imitates Rudyard Kip-ling.

The Life of Harriet Beecher Stowe, by Charles Edward Stowe and Lyman Beecher Stowe. Illustrations. $1.50. Houghton, Mifflin Co., Boston.

Miffile Co., Boston.

Harriet Beecher Stowe, of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" fame, and also noted as one of the most consistent advocates of the policy which ended slavery in this country in spite of a haughty landed aristocracy, was born June 14, 1811. So, this centennial volume comes to us in good season, written as it is by her son and grandson. The book is a remarkable revelation of a remarkable woman, who was alternately abused and praised, and the estimate given of her is fair and candid, combining historical accuracy with almost the charm of a novel.

The Fasting Cure, by Upton Sinclair, $1. Mitchell Rennerley, New York City.

Mitchell Kennerley, New York City.

Systematic fasting and health, Eat food as regularly as people generally do, and sluggish intestines tell you that bad health has arrived—that is the message of this remarkable book by a remarkable man, one of the greatest living advertisers in this country. This book, of 153 pages, contains reading matter which is reprinted from magazine articles on the general subject of fasting for health, and so much lect of fasting for health, and so much talk has ensued from the publication of Mr. Sinclair's advice that this book is the result. It is an eye opener. At the same time, it would be well to remember that what is one man's meat is another man's poison.

Old Reliable, by Harris Dickson. Illustrated. The Bobbs-Merrili Co., Indianapolis, Ind. Zack Foster, who had "little tufts of gray hair stuck up above his ears, and who sometimes looked like a rab-bit that had been shot at." is a colored man and a philosopher, but he is lazy and a perfect loafer. But he is a de-lightful humorist, and somehow earns the name of Old Reliable. An enjoy able, amusing view of the Southland is given, about Arkansas and Mississippi, and a bit of real fiction is evolved that is worth while.

York City.

Refreshing and original, and just such a novel of mental reconstruction—first work and failure and then success—that we instinctively hope to get from that professional healer of minds and bodies, Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, of Philadelphia, Pa. The vision he draws is alluring and splendid, and "John Sherwood, fronmaster," will be reckoned with, in counting the really big novels of 1910-11.

Essence of Honeymoon, by H. Perry Robin-sen. $1.50. Harper & Brothers, New York A dainty confection in fiction, giving the adventures of a couple of newly-weds, in England, who start out on their honeymoon in a vain attempt to prove that they are old married folks, just to escape the good-natured banter they dread.

The Moving Finger, by E. Phillips Oppenheim. Illustrated. $1.25. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

A bold, fascinating study of the occult and English scenes. Mr. Oppenheim is quoted as saying that he wonders anyone keeps novels in his house. Mr. Oppenheim, however, seems to make the business pay-for him.

Farm Dairying, by Laura Rose. Illustrated, $1.25. A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago. Eminently practical and useful, this cok of 298 pages is one to commend itself to all. Its style is easily understood, and its author is demonstrator and lecturer in dairying at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Canada.

To Love and to Cherish, by Eliza Caivert Hall. $1. Little, Brown & Co., Boston. Thoroughly American and speaking with unusual appeal as to mountain life in one of our Southern states, this novel has much of the charm and tenderness that made famous "Aunt Jane of Kentucky."

The Early History of Jacob Stahl, by J. D. Bereaford, $1.55, Little, Brown & Co., Boston.
From a psychological standpoint and bold character construction this English novel belongs to the very front rank of current fiction. The hero is of Bavarian-Jewish-Irish ancestry.

BOGUS OFFICER ARRESTED Pseudo Army Man Gets Into Trouble by Ordering Soldier to Salute.

PARIS, May 27.—(Special.)—A self-made officer, if not a self-made man, has been playing a fanciful trick on the reserve officers of a regiment in the southwest. He had a uniform made himself, and introduced himself for himself, and introduced himself without further formality to an officers' club. He was believed simply on his own word, and soon made a number of friends, appearing in his uniform at all the balls and public functions.

One day, however, as he was in uniform, he complained that a soldier had not saluted him, and inflicted two days' arrest of his own acc.rd. To see that the order was carried out he went to the barracks and found the soldier at liberty. He again gave orders of a very peremptory nature, but the sergeant on duty, knowing that a reserve officer would not attempt to do such a thing, which he had no right to do outside would not attempt to do such a thing, which he had no right to do outside his own quarters, informed his superiors of his suspicion. An inquiry was made and the truth was discovered. The pseudo-officer was at once arrested. As an excuse he stated that he could not resist the temptation to wear an officer's uniform.
