Oregon and Washington Instructors Form League for Mutual Improvement.

BENEFITS WILL BE GREAT

Classical Association Will Foster Interest in Study of Ancients. Other States Join in With Movement.

Organization of the Classical Association of the Pacific Northwest was effected yesterday afternoon at Portland Academy at the last session of a conference of instructors in classics of the leading educational institutions of Oregon and Washington. While only these two states are yet represented in the organization it is the purpose to extend it to include also the states of Montana, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming and Nevada.

The following officers were elected: Professor Louis T. Anderson, of Whitman College, Walla Walla, president; Professor David Thomas, of the University of Washington, Seattle, vice-president; Professor Frederic S. Dunn, of the University of Oregon, Eugene, secretary and treasurer.

The executive committee selected consists of Professor Frank C. Taylor, of Pacific University, Forest Grove; Professor E. Sherwood, of Willamette University, Salem; Miss Wallace, of Fortland Academy; and Dr. Thomas K. Slaney, of the University of Washington, Seattle.

The Classical Journal, published by the classical associations of the Middle West and South, was formally adopted as the organ of the association.

Seattle was adopted as the next place of meeting and the time set was the Christmas holidays of 1911.

Among the papers read during the conference, which extended over Friday and Saturday, were the following: "Syncretical Discipline and Methodical Construction," Louis T. Anderson, Whitman College; "The Religious Life of the People as Portrayed in Plautus and Terence," Arthur F. McKinley, Lincoln High School, Portland; "The Old Education and the New," Dr. J. C. Hazard, formerly of Portland Academy; "The Two-fold Problem of Our Educational Institutions," Professor E. Sherwood, Willamette University; "Browning's Translations of Aeschylus' Agamemnon," Dr. Thomas K. Slaney, University of Washington; "Some Phases in the Development of Greek Constitutions," Professor John Straub, University of Oregon; "Experiments in Teaching Elementary Greek," Professor Otis J. Todd, Whitman College.

One of the sessions of the conference was a banquet at the Imperial Hotel at 8 o'clock Friday night.

LAWYER DEFENDS COKE

Coos Bay Man Says Judge Stands High in Esteem.

An earnest defense of the record and the judicial reputation of Judge Coke, of Marshfield, against what a recall petition is being circulated, is made by J. W. Bennett, an attorney of Coos Bay, who is visiting in Portland and who is acquainted in Roseburg and other portions of the Second District.

"Judge Coke stands very high in the esteem of the people of Coos and Curry counties," he said, "as well as with the members of the legal profession where he is located. His decisions throughout the entire district are appreciated for their fairness, as well as from a judicial standpoint.

"The judge is careful and conscientious, and it is wrong to say that there is any feeling against him in any part of the district, except that possibly in the recent trial of Roy McClellan for murder, at Roseburg, where the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal. Some feeling may have been engendered by those who are not in sympathy with the defendant and also by reason of Judge Coke having imposed some heavy fees in cases where parties had pleaded guilty for violating the laws prohibiting the sale of liquor in that locality."

Mr. Bennett also said that neither Judge Coke nor his friends objected to the recall being invoked, but in view of the notoriety which has been given the matter they would insist upon its provisions being carried out. The alleged grounds in the petition for invoking the recall are the instructions which Judge Coke gave to the jury at the trial of Roy McClellan. "These instructions," said Mr. Bennett, "were carefully prepared by Judge Coke, in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme Court of this state, and if they had not been given and the defendant had been found guilty, the decision would have been reversed and the county put to the expense of another trial.

"The instructions were taken by the stenographer and can be obtained in black and white, and are entirely impartial and strictly in accordance with law, at least this is the opinion of a great many attorneys who know of them and are entirely uninterested in the proceeding.

"In the trial of Roy McClellan's case Judge Coke was sent for on account of his having no interest and being virtually unacquainted with any of the parties to the homicide, and it is unfortunate that the recall can be invoked on a matter of this kind at the instigation of those who feel personally wounded by reason of being fined for confessed violation of the liquor law. However, in view of the notoriety which has been given the matter, Judge Coke and his friends will be only too glad that the matter go before the people, and it is hardly fair to commence a contention of this character by stating that there is any sentiment against him at his home in Marshfield by reason of any decision or otherwise, as this is not the case. His decisions are recognized there as the result of a careful examination of the law, the testimony of the witnesses and the argument of counsel."

FAIR ASKS COUNTY'S AID

Livestock Association Appeals for Fund to Help Meet.

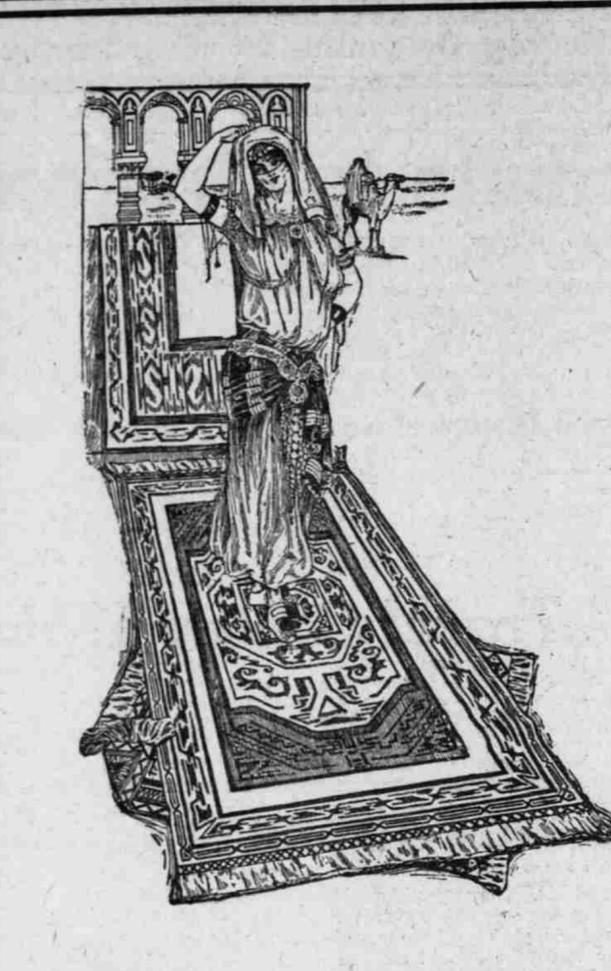

Application for an appropriation for the support of a meet of the Portland Livestock and Fair Association was made to the County Court yesterday by a committee of the organization. Whether the request will be granted will be determined next Tuesday. The state law allows the county to appropriate $1000 a year for fair purposes, but the county has been at considerable expense this year in various ways, and it is not known if the money is available. The committee who applied to the County Court for the funds included Julius Meier, J. P. Porter, Chris Minsinger and A. Westgate.

Season's Display of Anglo-Persian Rugs

Whitall's Anglo-Persian Rugs are the highest achievement in the art of weaving rugs by machinery. Into their making, for more than a generation, have gone the finest materials, the highest technical skill, the most critical taste, the most painstaking care.

Every thread of wool is imported from the mountainous regions of Persia, Afghanistan and the Caucasus. Every particle of dyestuff is tested repeatedly. Every improvement that inventive genius can suggest is utilized in their manufacture.

Today Anglo-Persian rugs are known everywhere for their beauty of design and coloring, their smooth and lustrous finish, their proved and tested serviceability.

In our windows this week is a notable display of Anglo-Persian rugs. Many more—in all sizes—are on our floors. They are new; most of them arrived last week. They are well worth seeing. We sell Anglo-Persian rugs in the 6x12 size for $55.00.

This is no more than you would pay for the same rug in New York or Chicago. It is some $400 less than you would pay for an Oriental rug of equal beauty and durability. If you care about your home, we believe that an Anglo-Persian rug will yield a larger return in permanent satisfaction than any other $55 investment you can make.

LONG LOST FOUND

Father and Daughter United After 14 Years.

The father scarcely stopped long enough after getting the letter to eat a meal, before he boarded a train for Portland. He engaged an attorney, who presented the case to the juvenile court, and it was arranged for the hearing to be given yesterday morning.

CHILD SOON RECOGNIZED

E. P. Apley, of Logan County, Claims Girl in Juvenile Court, After Tracing Her From Guardian to Portland Home.

Reunion of father and daughter, who had not seen each other since the girl, now nearly 15 years of age, was 14 months old, was a scene in the juvenile court yesterday. The petty trials of mischievous children were forgotten for the time, as the rugged farmer put his arms around the girl, and she cried and clung to him excitedly.

The father is E. P. Apley, of Logan County, North Dakota, who has spent many years in efforts to find his lost child. To Judge Gatens he told the story of how he and his daughter had been separated when she was a baby and how she had become lost to him. Apley's first wife had died soon after the birth of her daughter, Lillian, and at once a contention arose between the child's father and grandmother regarding who would have the care of the little girl. The contest between Apley and his mother-in-law became so bitter that the child was awarded to an orphan's home by the court and the relatives were denied her custody.

Child Is Adopted.

The home allowed the child to be adopted by Mrs. E. R. Owens, a school teacher, who then moved to a farm near Walla Walla. When the father applied for his daughter and discovered that she was missing from the institution he tried to find her foster parents, but discovered that they had

BOWLES TRY-OUT WINS

"A MATINEE HERO," PRESENTED AS CURTAIN-RAISER.

The premier production of "A Matinee Hero," a satire on himself by Donald Bowles, was presented yesterday afternoon as a curtain-raiser at the Baker Theater. This sketch is intended for a third tour in vaudeville and is the original work of Mr. Bowles. A packed house was in attendance and at the end of the play, so insistent were the outbursts of applause that the actor was brought a dozen times before the curtain.

In the parlance of theaterdom the sketch "made good." It is purely and obviously a farce, a travesty on that time-honored institution of the stage—the matinee hero. Mr. Bowles invests the role with daring cleverness and a spontaneity that wins.

Garbed in white flannels, with monograms tacked on gloves, hose, cuffs and even his wide picture hat, the matinee idol displays and discusses the various medals plastered all over his chest, and distributes his autographed pictures to the maids in the stage boxes and front row.

The story proper tells humorously of an old sea-dog, who loathes actors, and his giddy young daughter, who dotes on 'em all, and on this matinee hero in particular. He comes to call and displays so much charming ego that the old sailor insists on insisting with the bodily, but the maiden, with the help of a young brother, does a make-believe drowning "stunt," that forest the actor into the limelight as a real hero, or so father thinks, and like the fairy stories—everybody lives happy ever after.

The situations are ludicrous in the extreme and the lines bristle with new ideas and keen quips.

Neta Quing has developed an amazing amount of comedy out of her role as the hero-worshiper, and Ronald Bradbury as the captain is a constant source of merriment. His pantomime is delightful.

Stanley Christian plays the part of the young brother and does it excellently. He sings, too, in pleasingly-fresh voice, that earned for him a deserved recall.

Mr. Bowles has a songologue written by him. It's a very funny thing, about the life of a matinee hero, its joys and sorrows, which he gives with a swing while calling, between lines, for the spotlight.

The stage appointments are quite in harmony with the story, its scene being laid in the home of the old sea captain.

50-MILE WALK PUNISHES

Man Indicted for Forest Fire to Escape Easily After Hardship.

As a reward for walking 50 miles to a railway station to catch a train for Portland, after a rumor reached him that he had been indicted for setting a fire in the Siskiyou National Forest, E. G. Gardiner, a homesteader of Josephine County, will probably be let off with his tramp as punishment.

Through Attorney C. M. Idleman, Gardiner entered a plea of guilty yesterday before Federal Judge Bean and on motion of Deputy United States District Attorney Evans date of sentence was deferred until the last of the term, which means that his punishment will be merely nominal.

The forest took fire from a spark dropped by Gardiner from his pipe. Less than an eighth of an acre was burned and Gardiner assisted in extinguishing the blaze.

ROGOWAY IS NOT FOUND

Albany Man's Disappearance Puzzle to Grieved Wife.

Friends and the family of Nathan Rogoway, of Albany, are distressed over the disappearance of the young man who left Albany on May 22. His wife received a letter from him dated at Medford on May 26, but no word has been received from him since that time.

He was employed by A. Sternberg, a tanner, of Albany, and as buyer his work took him to various towns in the Willamette Valley. His family and employer are at a loss to account for his leaving, as his relations with his wife and his employer were entirely harmonious.

Rogoway is 25 years of age and has lived in Albany for the last five years. He has a wife and two small children.
