This is just what the ordinance provides for, and it will be found to meet Mr. O'Brien's re-quirements for the use of the streets; only the city will retain title and con-trol of the streets. Mr. O'Brien can get a franchise for the freight facilities if he will apply for one. I am with Charles Smith when he says that there should be no further delay in getting the franchise and putting up the freight depot, but he is mistaken if he thinks that the Ziegler ordinance stands in the way of building the freight depot, for it does not, as may be ascertained by an examination of its provisions.

The English army of occupation has its influence in Egypt. Lord Roberts will soon arrive, and many believe that a new era is drawing in the land of the Ptolemies. The natives are gradually acquiring the use of machinery and many of them are bechinery and many of them are be-ginning to manipulate automobiles, motors and engines, in which they find a fascination. The Egyptians are well worthy of our acquaintance. That I might be carreet above any doubt. I interviewed the American Consul, D. R.
