Coach Dolan Runs Aspirants for Eleven Through Hard and Grueling Practice.

Arrival of Carlson to Take Center Position Is Offset by Loss of Evendon Who Sustains Sprained Ankle.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE Corvallis, Oct. 7.—(Special.)—Football prospects at this college have not been prospects at this college have not been altered materially by the events of the past week. The arrival of Carlson, the Multnomah Athletic Club center, gave the work a decided impetus during the first part of the week, but this was offset very largely by the loss of Evendon, who sustained a sprained ankle. The week's work has been characterized by hard practice, evidently intended to give the 60 candidates who are aspiring to football honors a genuine tryout.

are aspiring to football honors a genuine tryout.

The first squad, under the direction of Coach Dolan, has lined up about the same way throughout the week. Carlson's arrival made necessary the shifting of Christman to a guard position, and the injury of Evendon forced his retirement and Jessup is now being used at fullback. Kellogg, who was relegated to the second team because of his unsatisfactory work, has taken a brace and has been shifted back to his end position on the first squad.

The second guard position has been filled by Otto Sitton, who played the same position last year. Captain May, and Moore, a hig 100-pound freshman, are playing the tackle places. At the ends Kellogs, Durling and Hetnol lawe heen alternating. "Shrimp" Reynolds, the midget quarterback, is attil holding his place, though several heavier men are putting up hard fights to push him out. His head work and his conscientious efforts make him a hard man to disledge.

The halfback positions are being taken care of by Toots' Richardson, who played in the backfield part of the time last year; a Southern California man by the name of Dwarie, who, be-sides being a good line plunger, has considerable ability in the kicking department and Shaw and Robinson, the latter an ex-Washington High School backfield man. The coaches also are giving Ingram, a last year's freshman, and Childress a good deal of attention. Indications are that the big problem Indications are that the big problem the coaches will have to solve will be in creating a backfield. It looks as though it were going to be necessary to use Reynolds again at quarter, which means a decided lowering of the average weight in the back field. Evenden, who weights 172, somewhat offset this, but the other two men probably will not average more than 150 pounds. This leaves a back field which will average very little over 150 pounds. Moreover, as yet the candidates for the back-field positions have not demonstrated very much speed. The coaches onstrated very much speed. The coaches realize that if they have to use light backs, they have to find the men who will be able to overcome this handicap.

will be able to overcome this handicap, in part at least, by their exceptional Line Helped by Carlson.

The line looks much better with Carlson in at center, and that position carrior in at center, she that posterior is taken care of as well as could be desired. Christman, the big red-headed guard, who comes to the college from Kentucky, gives promise of being able to take care of his position without much trouble. He weighs 182 pounds and has the kind of nerve which is tharacterized by quiet, aggressive play-ing. The other guard position is quite afe in the hands of Otto Sitton, who although light, is a physical giant and knows the game. Captain May seems to be working even better than he did ship seems to have aroused him, and ship seems to have aroused him, and unless he has an accident he will take care of his tackle position.

The other tackle, which is being played by Moore, is still in question. The big man is husky enough, but very slow and "green" at the game. One end position will be taken care of by Kellogg and the other will be disputed by Darling. Hetzel and Childress. It is rumered about the campus, but not authenticated by the coaches, that one or two of the old stars, who assembled for the alumit game, may be induced to stay and fill out their allotted time in football. It is suggested that both Keck and ex-Captain Hawley have a year of football to play. Both have expressed theseselves as being de-

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Oct. 7.—(Special.)—So scarce is fresh squad material at the University of Oregon this Fall that the football coaches are loath to permit the organization of a freshmen team, because of the depletion it would mean to the varsity practice ranks. The complaint which Graduate Manager Zednick of Washington, has registered against the ground rental terms offered by the Portland club, is not understood here, as he has already signed the 25 per cent contract and forwarded it to Eugene. The supposition is that he would like to transfer the game to Seattle.

The nightly scrimmages during the past week have added much interest to the Oregon outlook but the hopes of the lemon-and-yellow supporters have not been raised many degrees.
