The date has not been definitely stated, but will be near the close of the month. The William MacMaster home again will be the scene of a delightful dancing party, the variance of technique and execution is vastly interesting. After their marriage both Mr. Mulford and his bride will continue with their art and probably will make their home in the New York metropolis. Though this engagment is not particularly new, having been known for some time, it has not been formally announced in Portland until now.
