OMATO MINCEMEAT-One peck green tomatoes chopped fine, four pounds brown sugar. Boil these three hours. Twenty minutes before removing from the stove add one cup bolled cider, two tablespoons cinnamon. one tablespoon alepice, one tablespoon loves, nutmeg to taste, two teaspoons salt, two pounds raising. The raising may be doubled in quantity and one cup wine or brandy may be added if approved. This latter should be added after cooking. Pack into jars and seal white hot.

white hot. I am sure Mrs. W. C. B. will thank you, as I do, most heartily for coming to the rescue with a "tried recipe." I must explain, however, that I was not "skeptical as to the virtues of a purely vegetable mincement," for my family "went vegetarian" for some years be-fore I was born, and although by the time I arrived on the scene a mixed fore I was born, and although by the time I arrived on the scene a mixed dist had again become the rule, certain traditions and dishes remained to pre-serve the memory of the vegetarian epoch. Therefore I was brought up, so to speak, on "purely vegetable" mince-ples, and was, in fact, for many years extremely skeptical as to the virtues of any mincement not "purely vege-table." In fact, I still prefer mincement without meat for my own eating, and find it easier of digestion than the more complicated mixtures. My only doubt was whether green tomstoes don't know the exact propertions' and how to zerva it. Thanking you R. T. S. I have no recipe corresponding ex-actly to your description, which again does not correspond to my idea of "apple jack"-however, I may be mis-taken about this latter point. Perhaps some correspondence can set me right. The proportions of a mixture such as you describe would, in any case, be largely a matter of personal taste. The exact amount of sugar would depend upon the tartness of the apples used; the amount of "liquor" upon the prin-ciples and taste of the persons to whom it is to be offered. I judge that you want a kind of "apple toddy"-hot, sweet and sploy. This would be best served from a china punch howl. or if cold, from a tail flagon or pitcher, pref-erably of silver or of stone ware. I think you will get a better flavor by leaving the peel and seeds in the ap-ples. Stick a clove in each apple if tiked. After baking and roughly mash-ing cover with hot water; add a few strips of lemon rind and sweeten to taste. Let stand until cool then strain, and dilute with water if necessary. Some apples will be improved by the addi-tion of a little lemon julce. By mak-

By mak-ing a very concentrated solution at first ihe mixture need not be reheated, as the addition of boiling water will make it hot enough. Add the liquor you prefer, in the proportion suited to your taste, last of all, just before serving. For children the liquor should of course be omitted altogether. If the mixture is served in the punch bowl have a few tiny apples or crab apples, roasted and floating on the bowl-as described by Puck in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The fol-lowing recipes may be suggestive:

more complicated mixtures. My only doubt was whether green tomstoes could form quite as well flavored a basis as ripe apples—a doubt which I still venture to retain, though I should be delighted to be converted by the method you suggest. For several years I boarded with an old lady who was an excellent cook. Sometimes her friends used to say to her: "I should think you would hate to have a domestic science teacher boarding with you. She must be so critical and hard to please and all that." To which my old lady. I am proud to say, used to reply: "She
