

FAIRCHILD'S DEATH FORCES CANDIDATE

J. C. Lawrence Reluctant About Entering Political Race Against Governor Hay.

COMMISSION CHAIR OPEN

Resignation of Present Leader of Railroad Board Would Handicap Activity, Say Olympia Officials—Paulhamus Mentioned.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Oct. 14.—(Special.)—That J. C. Lawrence, of the Public Service Commission, soon will have to make up his mind whether he will be a candidate against Governor Hay, of whose administration he is now a part, is certain, but Mr. Lawrence at this time refuses to discuss the subject in any of his phrases. This situation has been brought about through the death of H. A. Fairchild, chairman of the Public Service Commission, who was buried last Wednesday.

For the next few years at least the heavy work will fall on Mr. Lawrence if he decides to remain. He will without question be made chairman of that body should he decide to continue in the work in which he is now engaged. With Mr. Fairchild's death, the appointment of the chairman of the Public Service Commission was organized and the law went into effect. He has followed its workings through the various parties that have come up to the present situation and he is now the only man in the State of Washington with a sufficient grasp of affairs to pilot the Commission through its greatly added powers, out of the wilderness without causing an extended and prolonged delay.

Resignation Handicap Seen. It is argued that he would be an easier man to replace than Mr. Fairchild, but if he should resign to run against his chief, the work would fall upon Jesse R. Jones, and he has been with the Commission only a comparatively short time. That the resignation of Mr. Lawrence, who will be the next chairman of the board, should be made, would be a severe handicap to the Commission work in this state and give it a setback for a much longer period than would be expected by the death of Mr. Fairchild alone, is admitted on all sides.

On the other hand, it is claimed that if Mr. Lawrence goes out at this time it will permit the organization of a new body of men to take up the work where it has been left off, or rather at the point to which it was carried by Mr. Fairchild and the other members of the Commission. This argument will no doubt be advanced by Mr. Lawrence in event he declines to stay on the Commission, but seeks other political honors than those he now enjoys.

Faithful Appointee Sought. That Mr. Lawrence is in an embarrassing as well as delicate position is well known and therefore he is almost prohibited from making any statement. But in all probability he will consult with various of his political advisers before making any decision. At least that is the impression about the statehouse.

An added interest has been given to the situation by the statement just issued by Governor Hay, at this time he says that he would like to appoint a man to succeed Mr. Fairchild who will make the Commission work his life career, so that he will be above petty political turmoil, and like Mr. Fairchild, be so strongly entrenched that no executive would even think of removing him to give place to some follower.

Should Mr. Lawrence resign, there is no one who would be able to take over the place to Senator W. H. Paulhamus, of Pierce County. Senator Paulhamus was one of the original men who fought for the Railroad Commission and he has always taken a keen interest in the work, being perhaps as familiar with the duties of that body as any other person in the state not connected with the department. But as yet no man has even been named upon for Mr. Fairchild's place, as Senator Paulhamus is not a attorney and therefore is hardly eligible to succeed the late chairman.

The vacancy will be hard to fill, for the men who measure up to Mr. Fairchild's standard are most of them drawing from $10,000 a year up and the state pays but half that sum. If Mr. Lawrence decides to be a candidate he will greatly complicate the political puzzle. If he decides to stay out the state may not be so interesting as is now predicted.

MT. HOOD PICTURE DRAWS Hood River Folk Marvel at $1000 Painting by Edward Hill.

HOOD RIVER, Or., Oct. 14.—(Special.)—Many valley and city residents have thronged the rooms of the Commercial Club this week and have marveled at the wonderful exactness in the reproduction on canvas of "Scenes Around Hood at Sunrise," a painting by Edward Hill, the summer here painter, who has painted the summer here painter the Oregonian's wonderful peak. Mr. Hill is a brother of Thomas Hill, who painted the "Driving of the Last Spike," depicting the climactic scene in the building of the Union Pacific Railroad.

For over six weeks this summer the handsome artist lived on a hillside near the upper valley home of Colonel W. F. Tucker, where he arose every morning at daybreak to watch and catch the effect of the rising sun on the snow peak and its reflection on the shimmering foothills. With the exception of the snow-capped part of the mountain, pink with the first light of dawn, all the picture is in shades of blue. All is worked out in the finest detail.

Mr. Hill has painted another scene of the upper valley, a smaller canvas, showing a road through the fir, between Parkdale and the Lava Beds. The artist values the painting of Mount Hood at $1000.
