POLICE DECLARE SWEETHEART SLEW

Spokane Girl, Murdered in Cold Blood, Discouraged Men's Attentions.

CASE 'LOVE AFFAIR,' BELIEF

Mystery Connected With Death of £2-Year-Old Anna Weber May Yet Be Solved-Every Policeman and Detective on Case.

SPOKANE, Wash, Dec. F .- (Special.)-Annie Weber, the 22-year-old girl whose dead body was discovered by North Coast workmen yesterday, was murdered by a sweetheart whom she had refused to marry. This is the latest theory of the police, after examining members of the family and former employers of the dead girl.

"I am going out to meet my sweetheart," were the last words of the girl as she left the home of her parents Thursday evening.

They laughed at her, as she had often told them she had no young man friend. Becoming embarrasged, she then said she was going to the home of Mrs. John A. Finch, where she intended assisting in serving supper. She was never seen at the Finch residence on the night of the murder. North Coast workmen yesterday, was the night of the murder. Girl Quiet in Manner.

Jerome M. Drumheller, for whom she worked up to two months ago as servant, said today that he had never seen a more quiet girl. She had no gentlemen friends of which his family knew. Minute searching for possible clews on the part of the police today brought to light the fact that the girl had walked up the river bank toward the carline. When she neared the top of the hill the footprints in the mud indicarline. When she neared the top of the hill the footprints in the mud indicated that she had experienced a struggle with someone. Her hat was torn from her head and lay at some distance from the body. Her purse also was cast aside and was found several feet away. No money had been taken, however.

Her parents say Annie discouraged the attentions of men, particularly because she intended taking a trip to Germany within as few months. It is this fact and the statement made by herself that she was going to meet her sweetheart that lead to the belief that a discouraged man committed the crime. Chief of Police Doust, Captain Martin Burns and detectives made another thorough search of the aurroundings today. When they returned Doust said:

Every Detective Working On Case.

"We think we can get the murderer, but there is nothing which we can safely give out at present. Every man on the force is working on the case."

The strictest secrecy is being maintained at detective headquarters, reporters being barred from even the outer offices, while the investigation and questioning of relatives and friends of the girl is going on today.

"It looks very much like a love affair," said Captain Burns. "We are working on every possible theory, but that seems the most probable at present. There were a lot of men working on the North Coast bridge not far from the scene of the murder, but the roar of the river would drown any success for help from their ears."

There was no evidence of criminal
